Yemen to significantly raise price of gas exports to South Korea

Agreement made under Saleh sold Yemeni gas far-below market value

Nasser Al-Sakkaf

SANA'A, Aug. 28—A 20-year-agreement signed between the South Korean government and former President Ali Abdullah Saleh in 2008 provided South Korea with liquefied natural gas for prices far below market-value, experts say. The South Korean government agreed to initial talks on Tuesday to raise the price of natural gas exported from Yemen from $3.20 to $14 for one million thermal units, said Rajeh Badi, the prime minister's media advisor.

Prime Minister Mohammed Salem Basindwa will establish a committee to travel to South Korea to sign the final agreement, Badi said. Basindwa met with the Korean Ambassador Lee Young-ho Wednesday and informed him that the Yemeni government would refer South Korea to the international courts and demand compensation if Korea is unwilling to agree to the price changes, Badi said.

Mohammed Jubran, an economics professor at Sana'a University, told the Yemen Times that Saleh's agreement with South Korea was a corrupt one that Saleh himself benefited from personally.

"Former President Ali Abdullah Saleh was the man largely responsible for this agreement. He wanted a cut from the commission, and he received it in return for [rock-bottom] gas prices," Jubran said. "He also wanted to strengthen relations between the two countries."

Badi said that Basindwa told the ambassador that the deal to export gas to South Korea through the Korean COGAS Company for such low prices left Yemen with economic consequences it is still recovering from.

Economic observers and members of the Yemeni Parliament called on the nation's government to cancel the agreement in 2009.

Jubran is skeptical of the success of the new agreement. The price of $14 is higher than the international market price of $12 for one million thermal units of liquefied natural gas, he said.

He ruled out the possibility that the South Korean government would agree to $14.

International law states that the previous agreement can only be nullified if corruption on the part of one government is proven.

"The issue could be referred to the Supreme National Anti-Corruption Committee. After corruption is proven, the contract would be cancelled," Jubran said.

Liquefied natural gas is exported through the Yemen Liquefied Natural Gas Company. Twenty-five percent of the country's gas, estimated at 2 million metric tons, is exported to South Korea annually.

President Abdu Rabu Mansour Hadi increased the price of liquefied natural gas exports to France through the French Total Oil Company from $3.20 to $7.00 per million thermal units at the beginning of this year, altering an agreement similar to the one Yemen has with South Korea.

Investigations ongoing for Air Force bus explosion

Spokesperson says bus likely tracked before bomb exploded

Ali Al-Moshki

SANAA, Aug. 28—Officials say they are making progress in the investigation of a bomb explosion on an Air Force bus on Sunday. The blast killed one person and injured 24.

A spokesman for the Air Force said an explosive device had been fastened to the underbelly of the bus and was likely remotely detonated.

"We found two small batteries. [We believe] the person who detonated the bomb was in a car tracking the bus," said spokesperson Abdu Al-Helali.

Al-Helali previously stated that the bus had been kept at the driver's home the night before the explosion. However, Al-Helali indicated this was common practice and doesn't not implicate the driver was involved in the attack.

On Wednesday, the Defense Ministry authorized three of the most gravely injured in the bombing to be sent abroad for treatment.

Sana'a's National Youth Conference participants tackle pressing issues

Disruptive Southern representatives asked to leave

Ali Al-Moshki

SANAA, Aug. 28—The two-day National Youth Conference kicked off in Sana'a on Wednesday with 570 participants nationwide attending but was off to a rough start.

Yemen's Prime Minister, Mohammed Salem Basindwa, was forced to cut his speech about the country's goals for unity short after being interrupted by conference attendees from the nation's South who began chanting, "Revolution in the South."

Those disrupting were asked to leave.

"They kicked us out. [But] we will never abandon our demands," said Adel Ba Hussein, who attended the conference as a representative from the South.

The conference, which is the first of its kind since the ousting of former President Ali Abdullah Saleh in 2011, was created to encourage youth to engage in dialogue about national issues, contribute ideas about the future shape of the nation's state and to identify priorities for youth.

"The conference [looks to achieve] youth's political and economic objectives and aspirations," said Suzan Abu Ali, a participant from Hodeida governorate.

Each of the major issues the National Dialogue Conference is tackling is also being discussed at the youth conference. This includes threats of secession by the South, a Houthi insurgency in the North and issues regarding sustainable development.

Outcomes of the conference will be presented to President Abdu Rabu Mansour Hadi.

Several Yemeni ministers, officials and foreign ambassadors attended the conference.

Several Taiz police stations closed after failing government inspections

Taiz governor orders construction of 10 new stations

Nasser Al-Sakkaf

TAIZ, Aug. 28—Taiz Security Chief Mohammed Al-Shaeri ordered the closure of three police stations in Taiz following surprise inspections to monitor performance.

The three stations were not adequately equipped and did not perform their tasks satisfactorily, Al-Shaeri said.

"This is a message to other police stations that don't perform their tasks," he said.

There are currently 32 police stations distributed throughout Taiz's 23 districts.

Al-Shaeri said nearby police stations would take over the duties of the three closed stations and would be available to serve residents.

The three closed police stations are the Beer Basha Police Station, the Mashrah and Hadnan Police Station and the Senah Police Station.

Al-Shaeri has previously closed police stations in multiple rural areas in Taiz for failing inspections.

Two months ago, Al-Shaeri warned area police stations of the consequences of failing to perform duties during the one of the most elevated security situations the country has ever seen.

Taiz information assistant Abu Bakr Al-Ezi told the Yemen Times that the governor of Taiz, Shawqi Ahmed Hael, has ordered local authorities to construct ten new police stations.

Construction of the new stations will begin in September and will be distributed based on population densities, he said.

Lightening storm kills 5 in Hodeida

Victims not properly sheltered from the storm

Samar Al-Ariqi

HODEIDA, Aug. 28—Five people died late Monday night after being struck by lightning in two mountain villages in Hodeida following a rainstorm.

Abdulrahman Jar Allah, the director of the Health Office in Hodeida, identified the victims as four women from the Al-Meghlah Village and one man from Al-Qnawes Village. The villages are located in roughly the same area.

Jar Allah said the mountainous areas of Hodeida are prone to thunder and lightning storms that often catch people off guard. Overall impoverished conditions in the majority of the governorate's villages means many cannot afford protection from the elements.

Jar Allah believes this to be the case with the five most recent casualties. He said the victims were living in poor conditions, exposed to the storm.

During the month of August, the height of Yemen's rainy season, the number of thunder and lightning storms increase in the country's central

Ongoing Faj Attan land dispute leaves one more dead, two wounded

Faj Attan residents stop tribesmen from fencing land

Samar Al-Araiqi

SANAA, Aug. 28—One soldier was killed and two others wounded during a land dispute between residents of Faj Attan and Aal Tuaiman tribesmen on Tuesday evening in Sana'a.

Clashes first broke out on Sunday, leaving two men dead and two men injured. All four belonged to the Aal Tuaiman tribe. A military battalion intervened to resolve the dispute.

Colonial Ali Al-Khashbi, the commander of the intervening military battalion, told the Yemen Times that tribesmen requested security forces pursue the gunmen attempting to prevent the Aal Tuaiman tribe from fencing a piece of land they claim they own.

Sheikh Obad Bin Saleh Tuaiman told

Al-Khashbi that the tribe was renting the 1,320 meters of land from the Ministry of Endowment and Guidance.

Al-Khashbi claimed that the issue would be resolved shortly, saying that the clashes were nearly finished.

governorates, leading to the loss of human life and property damage.

The Health Office in Hodeida recently released a report stating that a mother and three children died in the Al-Otmania Village during a thunder and lightning storm. Heavy rains have also led to deaths in the governorate. Three motorcyclists recently drowned during flash floods in the Al-Rashdia Village.

The governorate has been plagued by other extreme weather including a sandstorm accompanied by heavy rains and wind that canceled flights out of the area's airport on Thursday.

Hodeida Port was temporarily closed as well as the road that connects Hodeida to Taiz and a reported 60 houses were destroyed by the sandstorm, said Brigadier Abdulkareem Me'ad, the deputy of the Civil Defense Authority.

The Yemeni Metrology Authority expects extreme weather conditions to subside by the end of the month.

Judicial Forum changes name, welcomes new leadership

Elections are the first in 16 years at the organization

Story and photo by Ali Ibrahim Al-Moshki

SANA'A, Aug. 28—A newly elected head of the Judicial Forum marks an end to a 16-year period of stagnate leadership for the independent organization. The group also officially changed their name on Thursday to the Yemeni Judges Club, in a move that the leaders call symbolic of the organization becoming more inclusive.

On Tuesday, Judge Aljarah Baleed became the newest leader of the syndicate, which defends members of the judicial branch nationwide.

This month the local organization, the Esnaad Center for Empowering an Independent Judiciary and Rule of Law, issued a report that found 59 violations had been committed against members of the judiciary in August. Of the reported violations, nine were murder attempts.

The results of the election were announced at the Yemeni Judges Club's third annual conference that concluded this week in Sana'a. A little over 1,100 judges and other members of the judiciary voted in the elections, the Judicial Forum said. An estimated 1,500 people attended the conference.

“This is the first fair election at the level of the Yemeni praising the elections for voting in a Southerner from Abyan.

One of the club's founders and former minister of endowment, Judge Hamoud Al-Hitar, said in line with the nation's attempts to reconcile Northern and Southern divides, it was historic that the forum's newest leader is from Southern Yemen.

Al-Hitar added that the organization's members are now almost equally represented from the North and the South.

“The Yemeni judiciary will see improvement in terms of transparency, settling the issues and independence,” Al-Hitar said.

The newly elected Baleed said it is an honor to represent Yemen's judges.

“I will fulfill judges' aspirations and most importantly restore the prestige of the Yemeni judiciary,” he said.

The Judicial Forum was established in 1991 by a group of judges. It is based in Sana'a.

Eight die in clash between Houthis and armed tribesmen over alms collection in Amran

Rammah Al-Jubari

AMRAN, Aug. 28—Eight people were killed in armed clashes between Houthi affiliates and tribesmen in Harf Sifyan, Amran on Sunday. Area Security Manager Brigadier Yousif Albhsh said tribesmen refused to pay religious alms, resulting in the clashes. Houthis, a group of Zaidi Shiites concentrated in Yemen's northern governorates, have imposed a system of alms collection in many areas where they have control.

Four of the casualties were Houthis and four were locals from the area, Albhsh said.

Zakat, or alms, is an Islamic requirement to give money to the poor. Muslims typically give about 2.5 percent of their income.

Residents said they wanted to collect alms and build a school in their area, but were upset when Houthis affiliates asked for it instead, Albhsh told the Yemen Times.

The deputy minister of the Ministry of Local Administration, Abdurqaeeb Saif, has called on Houthis affiliates to stop collecting alms from residents, saying it is not their role.

The Harf Sifyan area includes five districts and borders the Houthi-dominated Sa'ada governorate. Harf Sifyan experienced a war in 2009 between the government and the Houthis.

Security expert Saleh Al-Asbahi said repeated confrontations with Houthis in the area are a spillover from the six wars the group fought with Yemen's former regime, led by ex-President Ali Abdullah Saleh.

Where the tourists go

One of Ibb's little-known districts is attracting travelling families with its photo opportunities and a relaxed atmosphere

Story and photos by

Tourism in Yemen has been suffering ever since the breakout of Yemen's popular uprisings in 2011. Coupled with the United State's recent terror alert, prompting not only the American but several other European nations to close their embassies in Sana'a, it's no secret that tourism agencies are desperate to attract visitors. Often left out of the conversation are domestic tourists.

Tour operators say that domestic tourism has taken a nose-dive in recent years because of unofficial checkpoints erected by warring tribes on major roads. There are still areas of the country that are attracting travelers because of their beauty and the relative ease of getting there.

Ibb, the central governorate located 170 km. south of Sana'a, has long-made tourist brochures with its photos of green agricultural terraces and mountainous terrains. Now, more than ever, people are choosing to spend their rest and relaxation time in places like Waraf district within the governorate as opposed to former tourist attractions on the coast like Hodeida, whose roads have been subject to banditry or Marib, where historic sites have been overshadowed by instability.

Waraf, characterized by its moderate climate, sloping mountains, picturesque hills and waterfalls, is located near Taiz governorate. Natives of the area say the destination used to only be frequented by nearby locals of Taiz and Ibb, but the area now seems to be developing a reputation as one of Yemen's premiere family destinations.

"Here, everything is green all year-long and the people love that," said Jamil Al-Warafi, a member of local council in Waraf.

"My concerns and worries disappear once I see the green landscapes and the tranquility of Waraf."

This past Eid, from the morning hours until early evening, a queue of cars lined the road leading up to Waraf's highest look-out point, Al-raais.

"I used to spend my vacation in Aden alongside my family, but after the political situation worsened following the 2011 uprising, I had no choices but [to go elsewhere]," said Hani Morad, a 35-year-old father from Aden.

Morad has also lived in Sana'a, but calls it too "crowded and noisy" to spend a vacation there.

"My concerns and worries disappear once I see the green landscapes and the tranquility of Waraf," he said. Morad decided to come to Waraf after a friend recommended it.

The district is comprised of 30 small villages but lacks traditional tourist infrastructure like hotels and restaurants so most people visit for the day and return to Ibb city at night for accommodations, which is about five kilometers from the town.

Most people bring food with them and have picnics throughout the day to avoid having to return to Ibb for a meal.

Ahmed Hamza, a 26-year-old from Taiz who had gone to Waraf for his past two Eid vacations, said this year he came prepared to spend the entire day in Waraf's hills.

"I decided to bring all my own supplies and equipment to avoid the mistakes of last year," Hamza said. He had previously forgotten to bring any food with him and had to head back to Ibb early. "We will stay longer this time," he said.

However, there is currently a local investor who recognized the potential of Waraf and has decided to build a 1,600 square meter compound on top of Alraais that includes two small hotels and two restaurants.

Construction began last year on the compound and is expected to conclude next summer in time for Eid, said Mohammed Derhim, the man behind the project.

"The influx of people here, pushed us to invest," Derhim said.

Hundreds of people visited Waraf during Eid to enjoy its green surroundings.

A hotel is being built on "Alraais", the highest point of Waraf, to accommodate the district's growing number of guests.

People will often bring enough food with them for the today to avoid having to return to the area's largest city, Ibb, for lunch.

Egypt's dead - dehumanized and disregarded

Hodan Yusuf
Aljazeera.com
First Published Aug. 25

Over 1,000 people have died in Egypt since Aug. 14, and are the result of the "worst mass unlawful killings in the country's modern history", according to Human Rights Watch. If those 1,000 were from the West, would the international narrative be any different?

Last April in Boston, three people lost their lives on a day when everyone was just trying to enjoy a marathon. Condolences came in from across the world and even from space, while Egypt has received very little. The same heads of state who poured with grief over those unjustified killings in Boston are the same heads of state who continue to do business with Egypt, disregarding the apparent bloodlust of this interim military regime. They continue to support the regime financially and militarily as the authorities continue to act with impunity killing protesters, including the slaughter of at least three dozen prisoners in a van. These people were reportedly among those detained following the raid on the Fateh Mosque. The exact number of dead and the way they were killed remains unclear, but witnesses have documented signs of torture and apparent burns on the bodies. Even prisoners of war have rights.

So what has gone wrong? The Egyptian media - both state and private - overwhelmingly support the interim military regime. Many TV outlets deemed too Islamic or critical were shut down immediately after the coup. This means that the majority of ordinary Egyptians have the unchallenged running narrative of the State beamed into their TVs and radios and printed in their newspapers. If recent history teaches us anything, it is that media in times of conflict can become the facilitator for mass bloodshed and war crimes.

A familiar trend

During the genocide in Rwanda, the radio station RTLM called on the Hutus to kill the Tutsis, referring to them as "cockroaches". Repeated over and over until it became truth, it ended up being the mantra of a genocide that claimed the lives of over 800,000 Tutsis. Dehumanisation, as a precursor to genocide, requires a deliberate and planned motive that utilises message proliferation mediums at hand.

Twenty years later, in Egypt today, the word is not cockroaches, but "terrorists", a loaded term used to tranish those who have Islamic political views.

Egyptian television often carries straps that say "Egypt Fighting Terrorism" and programmes often break into English translation for the benefit of any English-speaking viewers. The coup leaders and the supportive media machine have seemingly resorted to the language of terrorism. A spokesman for the Egyptian interim government declared that Egypt is at war with terrorism, extremism, theological and religious fascism. Labeling people and their grievance as terrorism is dismissive and even removes the burden of responsibility from the authorities to deal with them humanely and respectfully.

The problem is, these people are terrorists

This is inherited from the Western global "war on terror", which has served well to label, dehumanise, then cast aside human rights in the name of fighting terrorism. In Egypt, protesters exercising their constitutional rights were conveniently transformed into terrorists. This powerful and chilling account from Guardian journalist Patrick Kingsley describes how the terrorist narrative translated into live bullets and attacks on unarmed protesters - and even the doctors treating them. His account opens with a police lieutenant's live television interview outside Fateh Mosque. The policeman reloaded his machine gun while saying, "The problem is, these people are terrorists." The journalist goes on to describe the heartbreaking scenes of mourning relatives trying to admit the rotting corpses of their dead loved ones into the morgue while the police reportedly refused to sign off their corpses as murder. Truth and humanity, he said, were in short supply. It seems once labelled terrorists, even the dead are denied due process.

Changing language

The selective mourning of the international community teaches an entire generation that some people matter more than others. Some dead are dignified while others labelled, then disregarded. Unimportant. Too different to defend. A generation of Muslim children around the world in places like Egypt, Syria, Palestine and Yemen could grow up believing that their people, and by extension, they, are less deserving of the dignity afforded to others. Hard to avoid when the empty rhetoric does not reach them before the drones and bullets do.

History will no doubt judge this current regime and all its domestic and international allies harshly while they continue on the path of indiscriminate killing and the brutal crackdown on all they deem to be obstacles to their totalitarian rule.

It is beyond ironic that the former dictator Mubarak has been released while Morsi, the country's first democratically elected president, is still detained. The spiritual guide of the Muslim Brotherhood and other senior figures have also been arrested. Even ElBaradei is being charged with a crime, punishment for daring to resign when the bloodshed exceeded his personal tolerance levels.

Language is very important, especially in times of conflict. And in this turmoil, Egypt has begun with a new thesaurus of its own. A contentious thesaurus, where words like coup and democracy, mean very different things to different people and governments. However, the brutal fact of thousands of civilians dying at the hands of security forces should never be lost in translation.

OUR OPINION

Turning a new leaf

Once again Yemen has made history by setting an example of tolerance and political wisdom by issuing a national apology. The government headed by President Abdu Rabu Mansour Hadi issued an apology last week to the nation, asking for their forgiveness for mistakes made in the past and promising not to repeat them in the future.

This is amazing. We are the only country in the region that has actually done this. Skeptics say this apology is half hearted and does not mean anything. I think they are completely wrong.

First of all, making such an apology is not easy. It condemns acts of the past, therefore admitting to mistakes, and it also holds the current regime responsible to not repeat them.

The significance of such an apology is it is a sign of respect for the Yemeni people, and it allows them to turn a new leaf. People can forgive and be forgiven.

Yemen has an ironic situation. Almost everyone who had held any kind of power in the past was both a culprit and a victim at various points of their responsibility. If we start asking who should apologize to whom, we would wind up apologizing to ourselves. Therefore a national apology by the current government on behalf of all previous regimes and on behalf of the various political parties and components is a good thing.

This is a good time to rejoice. Let's not get into the details of terminology and intentions. Let's use the chance to turn a new leaf, and keep our eyes on the measures guaranteeing mistakes of the past are not repeated.

As a Yemeni citizen, I am extremely proud and satisfied. There is no way any angry person or skeptic can take this away from me. But as I embrace this amazing historical moment, I will remain conscious of the measures that need to be taken to create a better and peaceful future for all, where equal citizenship and human rights are a top priority for both current and coming regimes.

Almost naked

Group takes to the streets arming themselves with signs, chants and little else

Amal Al-Yarisi

When the group calling themselves, "Al-Arateet" or "Almost Naked" in English, caused some mouths to drop during Eid as they protested in the streets of Sana'a with some wearing little more than shorts to cover their private parts, they vowed it wouldn't be their last protest.

The group of around 30 men, took to the streets on the first day of the Eid vacation some wearing only jeans, some wearing only a maowzes (Yemeni lower body wraps) and others leaving much to the imagination. They said they were protesting a general lack of political accountability and development in Yemen.

"I am jobless. I am almost nude," they chanted, as street walkers stared back with a range of reactions, namely admiration, bewilderment and frequently disgust.

They say they wanted to get people's attention, and they did. The group's distinctive bearing of naked flesh angered many, who criticized their lack of modesty, a value that is typically reflected in the dress of both men and women in Yemen.

During one such march, the men covered themselves in revolutionary slogans and carried signs calling for treatment for persons injured during Yemen's popular uprisings in 2011, who are still seeking medical treatment.

Politically, the group describes themselves as liberal socialists and say they were some of the thousands that relentlessly camped out in Change Square in 2011 to call for the ousting of then-President Ali Abdullah Saleh. They have also conducted marches to call for reforms in security structures and to condemn electricity outages.

While the men have strong convictions, they aren't always positively received.

"The people laughed at our first march, calling us frivolous," said Khaled Al-Junaid, one of the march organizers and participants.

Hakeem Al-Bukari, one of the group's founders, said the group has become discouraged on several occasions and ended their marches early. He says bystanders often insult them.

The group says they may consider changing their name to perhaps ease criticisms, "but we will not change our way of protesting," said Al-Bukari.

Many are questioning the group's tactics. Amal Al-Humidi, a private-sector employee, said Al-Arateet's protests aren't very respectful.

"Has nudism become a way to achieve demands? There are many appropriate ways to make demands [in other ways]," Al-Humidi said.

However, the group says it has a following and they are committed to forcing the government to pay attention to them, even if they have to do it half-naked.

"We still want other people to join us," Al-Bukari said.

The social networking site Facebook has been one way the group has found like-minded people. Their Facebook page displays photos of their protests and discusses what they call their "revolutionary goals."

"Our number of [facebook followers] is increasing day by day as [people] use their [personal] Facebook pages to post about us, share our posts and call [others] to partake in our protests," Al-Burki said. "We intend to broaden our activities outside Sana'a."

Among Al-Arateet's 400 supporters on Facebook are many women but to date no female has marched with them. The group doesn't necessarily want women to participate because they foresee negative backlash. They say as society stands now, women's participation would be too controversial. When they are outside the home, women typically cover their entire bodies with an abaya, a long black dress that hits below the ankles and a hijab, a head scarf.

Although other countries like Egypt and Tunisia have had campaigns that contain nude men and women for different political causes, Al-Arateet recognize they may be the first of their kind in Yemen.

"Everyone has absolute freedom of expression and opinion," Al-Bukari said. "Al-Arateet draws people's attention which contributes to [making change]."

Al-Arateet members will continue to bare all as they strive to get their political messages across.

Al-Arateet says they draw inspiration from iconic social activists, adopting their own unique form of protest.

In rural areas, pools save residents exhausting trips for water

Rammah Al-Jubari

Only twenty-four percent of Yemenis have access to running water in their home, said National Water Strategy water expert Mohammed Al-Ariqi. That leaves 76 percent of the country reliant on water from wells, pools of rain-water or purchased water.

Not all pools are for swimming

Himeir Zimam lives in the mountainous village of Haqeel in Hajja governorate. Despite being only 20 kilometers from the heart of the governorate, residents in Haqeel have no access to clean running water. Residents have resorted to building pools to collect water for their daily use, but not for drinking.

"The pool helps us cover our basic water needs but, like other locals, I have to fetch drinking water from a natural spring 4 kilometers away, on the back of my donkey," Zimam said.

Zimam says pools are necessary to fend off the constant exhaustion resulting from fetching water.

"People say 'water is the essence of life,' [but in Haqeel] we say, 'the pool is the essence of life.'"

Pools are commonly built in mountainous areas because the increasing number of wells is significantly depleting the springs.

Pools vary widely in size, accommodating small and large families alike. The price to build a pool is beyond the reach of some Yemenis.

Zimam told the Yemen Times that a pool that is four meters deep, four meters wide and four meters long would cost well over YR 1 million, or about $5000.

Stones and cement are used to line the pool in order to prevent the water from soaking into the earth.

Pools are typically built near a family's crops so that they can more easily water them.

Many families save and use the rainwater collected from their roofs through a pipe that leads to a pool.

While the use of pools to collect water isn't a new phenomenon, it is more widespread than it ever was in the past. Abdulla Qaed, 55, told the Yemen Times that having a pool is 'a must'.

Qaed explained that the amount of rainfall has decreased over the past years, threatening the water supply of rural areas.

"We're required to buy water, which is expensive because it must be transported with vehicles to remote areas," Qaed said.

Ninety percent of pools in rural areas are uncovered, said Abdullhaliq Alwan, the director of planning and water policies at the Water Resources General Authority. Insects or animals can fall into uncovered pools and affect the safety of the water.

Alwan said that pools are often dangerous and result in the spread of parasites and amebas.

"Despite the threat of disease, families in rural areas have no choice but to use pools—they can't live without water," Alwan said.

What makes the situation worse, Al-Ariqi told the Yemen Times, is the fact the people in rural areas often swim in their pools, leaving the water even less hygienic.

"Lack of awareness about the hazards of such behavior spreads disease," Al-Ariqi said.

Tackling the issue

Yemen's water crisis, particularly in rural areas, is receiving attention from a number of governmental and non-governmental organizations that have launched water projects.

The Social Fund for Development

Locals can expect long queues for Yemen's depleted water supplies.

Women in rural areas are typically tasked with the job of fetching clean drinking water.

(SFD) is a government organization that is supporting the building of pools for local communities that lack wells and springs. SFD pays for the cement and stones necessary for the pool, families are responsible for the labor costs. The organization ensures the safety of the pools it builds by providing covers and prohibiting swimming in the pools. The size of the pool is determined by the number of family members.

SFD Water and Environment Department director Abdulwahab Al-Mujahid told the Yemen Times that 361,000 people have benefited from the pool project.

The project is a way of relieving women who are predominantly burdened by the fetching of water, which by its very nature is time-consuming, laborious work.

"Women in these families are responsible for bringing water from remote areas and the project aims mainly at alleviating their suffering," he said.

تصرفات الإخوان هي التي أستعدت الآخرين في الداخل والخارج

الكاتب والمحلل السياسي مصطفى راجح:

ما حدث في مصر نسف كل قيم الثورات العربية التي اندلعت في ٢٠١١

عبد الحفيظ النهاري

مصطفى راجح

كما فاجأتنا مصر في ثورة ٢٥ يناير ٢٠١١ فاجأتنا بما حدث الأربعاء ٣ يوليو.. عزل الرئيس المنتخب محمد مرسي بعد عام من وصوله السلطة في سيناريو سيظل مثار جدل من قبل دولة لا يختلف اثنان على قوة تأثيرها على منطقة الشرق الأوسط.. في اليمن أدرك الجميع هذا التأثير حين تحولت وسائل الإعلام ومواقع التواصل الاجتماعي منذ احتشد المصريون في التحرير إلى وسائل مصرية الوجهة والتناول.. كيف لا والتأثير لا يتوقف عن كونه جغرافيا أو قوميا وإنما يتعداه إلى السياسي العميق.. تداعيات أحداث ٣٠ يونيو في مصر على المشهد السياسي في اليمن.. موضوع هذا الحوار الذي تستضيف فيه الصحيفة الأستاذ عبد الحفيظ النهاري نائب رئيس الدائرة الإعلامية لحزب المؤتمر الشعبي العام والكاتب والمحلل السياسي الأستاذ مصطفى راجح..

حوار وتصوير/ محمد الحسيني

لاترفض كل ذلك العنف بل على العكس تشجع على ممارسته.. أنا كنت أشاهد قبل أيام برنامجا في (mbc) المفكر سعد الدين إبراهيم من الناس الذين نادوا بالديمقراطية في العالم العربي ينظر في مشهد في التلفزيون أحد الشباب المتظاهرين يقفز من فوق الجسر لأنهم محاصرون من الجانبين، فعلق على ذلك بالقول إن جماعة الإخوان جماعة مسلحة ١٠٠٪ لأنهم دربوا أعضائهم على الهروب والتسلق.. الذي حصل انه من بداية التسعينات أوقفت أميركا وأوروبا بندا لدعم الحركات المناوئة للشيوعية وعندما انتهت الحرب الباردة حول البند هذا لدعم منظمات المجتمع المدني في الوطن العربي والتي طيلة ٢٣ عاما وهي تستلم دعما خارجيا أمريكيا وأوروبيا باسم الحقوق والحريات وتعقد ندوات عن حق الحياة وحق التعبير وحق التظاهر السلمي.. كل هذه المبادئ الآن نسفت ويقولوا للإسلاميين كلهم في الوطن العربي لا مجال أمامكم إلا الإرهاب..

حسن.. دعني أنتقل إلى الأستاذ عبد الحفيظ.. هل أدتكم في المؤتمر أحداث العنف والدماء التي سالت وتسيل في مصر الآن؟ عندما ندين العنف فإننا ندين العنف الذي يحدث لكل الأطراف.. من قال لك أن العنف يحدث من طرف واحد.. إذا كانت أقسام الشرطة تتعرض للتهديد أكثر مما يتعرض له المعتصمون.. وأقسام الشرطة مسلحة إذا أردت أن تعرف مستوى العنف الذي يقوم به الطرف الآخر الذي يدعي أنه مدني كيف أنها مسلحة ومجهزة بكل وسائل الدفاع ومع ذلك ينجح الإخوان في اختراقها ومهاجمتها.

يعني هذا أنكم في المؤتمر تتفقون مع من يقول أنه يوجد لدى المعتصمين أسلحة في أماكن اعتصاماتهم؟ هذا جزء من المشهد، لكن نحن إجمالا لسنا مع الصراع المصري المصري، وأقول لك بصراحة لولا وجود المؤسسة العسكرية والأمنية بهذه القوة والإنضباط لتناحر المصريون فيما بينهم ولما استطاعت هذه المؤسسات بعد ذلك أن تضبط هذا الصراع العنيف بين أبناء الشعب المصري، ونحن ندعو الجميع إلى الحوار ونبذ العنف.

دعني أنتقل إلى مصطفى.. ذكرت أن هناك حولا سياسية كانت يمكن أن تكون بديلا لحالة العنف والفضوض التي هي قائمة الآن، ماهي هذه الحلول؟

أنا أرى الآن أسلوب العنف الشامل هو السائد.. كان بالإمكان حتى بعد الانقلاب إذا ابدى الإنقلابيون أنهم قادرين على استيعاب جماعة الإخوان المسلمين كشررك في مرحلة إنتقالية حقيقية كان ممكن، حتى قبل إقتحام إعتصامات رابعة والنهضة كان الحل السياسي ممكنا، لكن بعد إحراق الإعتصامين وبهذا الشكل هم لا يحرقون المعتصمين ولا يجتثون جماعة الإخوان فقط، بل لكنهم يجتثون الحرية والديمقراطية وحق الإنسان في الحياة عموما.. والحديث عن الديمقراطية وأن هذا يحدث في مصر بشكل مؤقت هذا طرف.. إجتثت جماعة الإخوان بهذا العنف وبهذه الوحشية من سيجبر أحد مستقبلا في مصر على إحترام قواعد اللعبة السياسية.. الذي أقصى مرسي ليس الشارع وإنما هو الإعتقال.

التي وضعها دون دراسة.. هذا ما قصده.. كما أن الإخوان في الحكم لم يتعاملوا مع المصريين كشعب واحد، كما لم يتعاملوا مع الناخبين الذين انتخبوهم بكل أطيافهم.. كما انه لم تكن هناك إنتخابات متكاملة.

عفا سيد عبد الحفيظ كيف لم تكن متكاملة؟

يعني لم يكن هناك إنتخابا لمجلس النواب ومجلس الشورى كان فيه نظر، وبالتالي مضى الإخوان إلى الأمام بالرئاسة فقط.. على فكرة عندما نقول إنتخابات.. المؤسسات الديمقراطية الجديدة في مصر لم تكتمل، وبالتالي هرب الإخوان بالرئاسة إلى الأمام في محاولة أخونة الدولة وفي محاولة تجيير الدولة لصالح الأجندة الحزبية والتنظيمية الخالصة، وهذه هي المشكلة.. يعني المشكلة لم تكن لدى الإخوان في العمل التنفيذي في الدولة أو في أدائهم في قيادة البلاد، وإنما في محاولة إحتكار السلطة الرئاسية وسلطة الدولة وتحويلها لخدمة التنظيم.

لكن هل تنكر أنه كان هناك ما يشبه الحرب على الإخوان حين وجودهم في السلطة من قوى إقليمية لمنعهم من تحقيق إبتة نجاحات يلبون فيها مطالب ناخبهم؟

على العكس، تصرفاتهم هي التي استعدت الآخرين في الداخل والخارج.. تصرفاتهم التي بدأت بالإعلان الدستوري وهي التي اختلف فيها مع ما تحدث به زميلي في الحوار الأخ مصطفى لأن من بدأ بقتضة الأجندة الديمقراطية أو الآمال الديمقراطية التي بنيت عليها ثورة ٢٥ يناير هم الإخوان، بداية بالإعلان الدستوري وإنهاء بالدستور الذي اعتبره أنا مفصل على مقاس الإخوان أو بالأحرى جلاية على مقاس الإخوان المسلمين وليس على مقاس مصر، وكثير من الإجراءات التي كانت في طريقها لاستكمال أخونة الدولة في الأجهزة الأمنية والعسكري.

اسمح لي أستاذ عبد الحفيظ أن أنتقل بالسؤال إلى الأستاذ مصطفى.. ما رأيك في ما طرحه عبد الحفيظ؟

أنا أرى أن هناك مستويان للنقاش، المستوى الأول في الديمقراطية وتجربة الإخوان في الحكم، والأخر هو في إهدار قواعد اللعبة، بما فيها إهدار حق الحياة، حيث المستوى الأول، نتفق ونختلف فيه كيف ما شئنا، والمستوى الآخر يجب أن نتفق فيه وهو رفضنا لإراقة الدماء، ولو كان هناك رفض لحكم الإخوان كان يمكن أن يكون بالوسائل السياسية.. الذي فعله الجيش المصري هو انقلاب على الرئيس المنتخب وإنقلاب أيضا على الجموع التي خرجت لتحتج ضد مرسي.. هو لم يمهلهم أكثر من اسبوع وانقلب على الجميع واختطف السلطة، والإهدار الذي نتحدث عنه من بينه تحويل القضاء إلى أداة من أدوات الممارسة السياسية.. عندما تقتل الناس بكل هذه الوحشية.. عندما تصادر الحقوق والحريات.

لكن ربما هناك إجماع على رفض العنف الممارس؟

لا هذا غير صحيح.. هناك نخب ثقافية ومحسوبة على أنها تيارات الليبرالية والحدثة

التي اندلعت في ٢٠١١. والإنقلاب الذي حدث لم يكن إنقلابا فقط بل كان إنقلابا ثم إجتثاثا، لأنه نسف مبدأ التداول السلمي للسلطة والإحتكام إلى إرادة الجماهير، لذلك رأينا أن طرفان يقفان الآن ضد الإخوان، هما الجيش المصري والقاعدة بزعامة الظاهري، حيث يقول الظاهري لمرسي والإخوان لقد وصلتم إلى وضعكم هذا بسبب عدم تحكيمكم للشريعة وقبلتم بحاكمية الجماهير، وهو يدرك جيدا حجم التغيير الفكري والسياسي والثقافي الذي أحدثته جماعة الإخوان بقبولها العمل السياسي تحت عناوين الديمقراطية والتداول السلمي وغيرها من العناوين التي لا يقبلها فكر القاعدة.

كيف استنتجت هذا الطرح؟

أنا أفرق بين الإتفاق أو الإختلاف مع الإخوان وبين إهدار مبدأ يتمثل في الديمقراطية والإرادة الشعبية، وهو ما حدث في مصر، كما أن الذي حدث ليس هدرا للديمقراطية فقط، وإنما كون السلطة الإنتقالية التي تمثل النظام العسكري الفاشي لأنه الآن في طوره الخارج عن كل القواعد، ذهبت إلى إتباع سياسة الإجتثاث للإخوان وللمعارضين للإنتقال عموما.. وإلا ما الذي يدفعها إلا تصفية إعتصاماتهم.. وخلاصة القول أن ما قام بها الجيش المصري أهدر الديمقراطية والتداول السلمي للسلطة واستقلالية القضاء لأنه حوله إلى أداة للنيل من الخصوم ولتلفيق التهم وإعداد الملفات المفبركة بين ليلة وضحاها.. أهدروا الحريات وحق التظاهر السلمي والإعتصام.. أهدروا الحق المقدس الذي تجمع عليه كل الأديان والحضارات وهو حق الإنسان في الحياة.

إذا سيد مصطفى أنت تؤيد من كان يقول أن هناك مؤامرة ضد ثورات الربيع العربي وأن ما حدث في مصر هو بداية لتنفيذ هذه المؤامرة.. هل هذا دقيق؟

أنا أتصور أن هناك حدث داخلي وتأتي دائما الأحداث الخارجية لكي تستثمره، أنا لا أؤمن بأن المؤامرة لاتوجد من عدم ومن يقول أن الإخوان صعداوا إلى الحكم بضغط أميركي هذا كلام غير صحيح، ما حصل إن النظام الرسمي العربي بدأ ينهار في تونس وفي القاهرة.. وكانت جماعة الإخوان الجماعة الأكثر تنظيما من بين كل الجماعات السياسية الموجودة، وكان من الطبيعي أن تصل إلى الحكم.. وعموما الحرب الأكبر التي تشارك فيها الدول الإقليمية هي حرب ضد ثورات الربيع العربي والقيم الجديدة التي رسختها الجماهير العربية في ٢٠١١.. التظاهر السلمي، حق الإحتجاج، إمكانية إسقاط أنظمة وديكتاتوريات عتيقة بالعمل السلمي الديمقراطي.

أستاذ عبد الحفيظ ماهي المحطات التي بنيت عليها قولك إن الإخوان وصلوا الحكم بدعم خارجي وليس باختيار شعبي؟ أنا لم أقل بدعم خارجي.. أنا قلت كانت هناك عاطفة شعبية ثورية لم يكن يهمها في ذلك الوقت من يصعد من التيارات بقدر ما يهمها الهروب من الماضي والدخول في مرحلة جديدة.. هذه العاطفة اللخظية اتضح بعد عام من حكم الإخوان المسلمين أن الناس بدأوا يتذمرون أو يندمون على أصواتهم

لولا هذه الضغوط من القوى العالمية التي سلمت الحكم للإخوان ظنا منها أنهم الأكثر تأثيرا للقيادة في هذه المرحلة.. وهذا ما ثبت خطاه فيما بعد، وبالتالي فإن فوز مرسي لم يكون بأصوات الإخوان المسلمين وإنما من كل المصريين الذين لا يريدون العودة إلى الماضي.

طيب إسمح لي أن أنتقل بالسؤال لضيفي الآخر الكاتب والمحلل السياسي مصطفى راجح.. سيد راجح هل تعتقد أن ما حدث في مصر مؤخرا كان مصريا مائة بالمائة؟

بعض النظر عن أنه كان مصريا خالصا أو كان نتيجة تأثيرات إقليمية وغيرها.. الذي حدث مصر نسف كل قيم الثورات العربية

بها قيم الحرية والديمقراطية والعدالة والمجتمع المدني.

أتقصد بكلامك هذا أن تشكيل التكتلات في ٢٥ يناير كان عفويا وفي ٣٠ يونيو كان مدروسا؟

نعم.. كانت تحالفات الإنتخابات الرئاسية تحالفات عاطفية ما يزال الشعب فيها مشحونا بشحنة ثورية عاطفية لم يتم فيها فرز واضح للقوى السياسية وللبرامج وللرؤى والأيدولوجيات، لكن بعد الإنتهاء من الإنتخابات الرئاسية وفوز مرشح الإخوان المسلمين بنسبة ضئيلة، بل يقال إن فوزه لم يكن دقيقا بقدر ما كان نتيجة ضغوط من قوى كبرى عالمية على المجلس العسكري لأن النسبة التي فاز بها ما كانت لتكون

أبدأ معك أستاذ عبد الحفيظ هل تعتقد أن ما حدث في مصر في ٣٠ يونيو يشبه ما حدث في ٢٥ يناير؟ في الواقع ما حدث في ال ٣٠ من يونيو في مصر هو امتداد لما حدث في ٣٠ يناير، هو امتداد لذات الثورة لذات القيم، لذات الإرادة، ما جعل ٣٠ يونيو يأتي كمرحلة أخرى في تصوري هو تصحيح لمسار ال ٢٥ من يناير.

لأن التحالفات التي تمت في الإنتخابات الرئاسية كانت تحالفات عاطفية خوفا من عودة النظام السابق أونكابة به ولم تكن تحالفات إنتخابية أو مبنية على استراتيجية تهتم بالمبادئ أو تحافظ على القيم التي قامت من أجلها ثورة ال ٢٥ من يناير واقتصد
