Mystery Unrevealed

Death toll caused by the explosion in the USS Cole destroyer increased to 17 while the injured were airlifted for treatment at the U.S. military' Landstuhl Regional Medical Center in Germany

General Charles Moore commander of the Fifth fleet arrived in Aden on Friday and visited the USS Cole. Two other warships arrived on the same day to hoist Cole home to avoid its sinking out of water leakage.

While Aden seaport authority still envisaging confidentiality on results saying that investigation is still carried out, official authorities say that they possess a documentary film showing the destroyer since entering the port until the incident took place. They added that the explosion was caused from inside.

Brigadier Mohammed Ali Ibraheem Commander of the naval base in Aden discounted in a press statement suggestions that it was a premeditated incident. He said that primary investigations into the event and damage to the warship and surrounding buildings did not suggest that the incident was deliberate.

An official source in the Yemeni Ministry of Interior denied last Sunday statements made by a spokesman for the U.S. State Department who alleged that inability of Yemeni government to impose its powers on remote areas made Yemen haven for "terrorist" groups. The same source added that Yemen wasn't and would not be a shelter for terrorists.

Official sources in Aden revealed that President Saleh had met with American Ambassador to Yemen Barbara Bodine and discussed the latest developments.

The new commander of the American Central Command General Franks is scheduled in Yemen for October 20 on his first visit to Yemen.

The Yemen Times correspondent in Aden said that about 100 American investigators had arrived in Aden. American experts had also arrived to repair the destroyer.

More information is expected to be revealed on Sunday evening in a press conference. At another level, the Yemeni police arrested 25 suspected of having relation with the Cole incident. Sources said they are being interrogated. These suspects include workers in the port in addition to two persons thought of having non-Yemeni citizenships. But this has not been confirmed by the police who did not deny the arrest. It also confirmed that a list of names wanted by the police will be summoned during coming few days. Official sources said the President is closely following up the investigation.

Words of Wisdom

"In all cultures worldwide, responsibility grows with social and political stature. That is probably because more power entails more responsibility, by definition. Also because people with a higher public profile traditionally become role models and therefore shoulder a heavier burden and, therefore, shoulder a heavier burden In addition, leaders are often seen as a source of inspiration and spiritual and moral guidance. For those and many ons, people at the top of power structure carry a bigger onsibility than the average individual."

Our Opinion

Yemen, Country of Peace!

The current circumstances force us as a country to reconsider our calculations about the future. We have been doing relatively well, although slowly but we were advancing towards development. What's happening today is really a draw back. Something that could take us miles behind form where we stand now.

The reputation Yemen has now in the western world portrays it as an unsafe country full of terrorism and crime. As if it wasn't enough what role the American film "Rules of Engagement" played in tarnishing Yemen's image outside, now these happenings in our country give it an ugly image and we find ourselves being accused of being ter-

It's not easy to rule a country. We have often complained that it could have been better, but today we realize what a huge responsibility it is to be a president of a country, and that too one with a strategic location like Yemen.

Just when our relations with America and England was on a high wave, these incidents took place and caused a setback. Many Americans expressed their anger and rage regarding what happened. Their support for their fellow citizens is quite remarkable and worth admiring. What I don't understand is why we are not understood when we do the same with our fellow people in Palestine likewise.

What next? The mystery of the American ship will be revealed in due time. Investigations are taking place every minute and as if the Yemeni authorities can not do it on it's own, Aden has been flooded with American soldiers with their guns and dogs taking care of the issue. What happened at the British embassy will also be cleared in due

But then, it will take the world a long time to forget what has happened. And to look at Yemen with different eyes, to start believing that Yemen is a country of peace. A country which proudly welcomes its guests and takes good care of them However, we should admit that these two incidents have caused damage to Yemen and its economy, for now lots of people including tourists and businessmen who were interested in Yemen have reconsidered other options.

We did make progress lately in minimizing kidnapping incidents and tried to preserve peace. But now, the challenges facing this country are more

We need not only to overcome the drawbacks but also push further ahead, in order to catch up the rest of the world and live up to the mark we set for

Constitutional Amendments Opposed

Yemeni Opposition Coordination Council recently announced refusal of proposed constitutional amendments. In its meeting last Wednesday the council decided not to address the parliament in regard to the amendments when they are referred to as referendum. The Council reported that the amendments were purported to concentrate power within the President's hands and entitled him to control both the legislative and Judiciary authorities. It added that they (amendments) would turn the country back to ages of dictatorship and monopoly of authorities which would, in the long run, block democracy, and civil and political freedoms.

A PGC MP described the opposition's stance as useless since the amendments would be referred to ety to hear their opinions.

On the other hand, the ad hoc committee for constitutional amendments, headed by Speaker of the parliament, Sheikh Abdullah Ben Hussain Al-Ahmar announced organizing a meeting scheduled for tomorrow to discuss the amendments. Political parties as well as chief editors of local newspapers have been invited to attend the meeting.

Those reactions were escalated by "Dahm Al.Hamra" one of the biggest Yemeni tribes led by Sheik Yahya Al-Sha'if, living on both sides of the borderline. A gathering of the tribesmen said that the borders should be drawn according to agreements made long time ago with the neighboring tribes on the other side of the borders, otherwise no company will be allowed to do that.

" Dahm Al.Hamra" tribe is well known for its strength and its leading position among other tribes who expressed their readiness and willingness to stand by " Dahm Al. Hamra". Sheikh Yahya Al. "Committed to Constitutional Texts"

he constitutional amendments to be discussed in the near future in the parliament have become the axis of Yemeni politicians and plebeians discussions. From the discussions and points of view it could be deciphered that while some are supporting the amendments, others are asking for making additions and adjustments and a third party is opposing them. It is normal that this happens amid the atmosphere of the democratic experiment in Yemen. But the question is whether these amendments would contribute to enhance the democratic experiment or, as the opposition, apprehends would restrict it. Will the amendments agree with the formation of the Yemeni society segments, specially after the establishment of al-Shoura Council which is intended to share the responsibility of decision-making along with the elected parliament? The more significant query is whether there is a full commitment to the constitutional texts and soundness of the measures fol-

Mr. Ali Abu Hulaiqah, chairman of the Constitutional Committee in the parliament, the reporter of the committee for constitutional amendments headed by Sheikh Abdullah al-Ahmar, speaker of the parliament gave the YT answers to some of such urgent questions through the following dialogue:

O: What is the committee supposed to do? Does it include elements from the opposition parties?

A: The committee was formed under directives of the Speaker of the Parliament. It consists of 45 members including heads of political blocs and chairmen of permanent committees. The committee's major task is to study and discuss reports prepared by the ad hoc committee representatives from the PGC, Islah, Ba'ath and Nasserite parties, assigned with receiving remarks and proposals on the amendments proposed by the president and also the proposal submitted by 144 MPs to amend articles No. 111 and 158 related to extension of presidency period. All opinions and suggestions submitted have been classified and compiled in a report for discussion by the constitutional committee.

Q: Will the proposed opinions contained in the report be taken into account by the special committee?

A: The constitution does not force the committee to abide by the ideas put forward. However, in view of the committee's desire to benefit from others' ideas regarding any text or amendment that will help strengthen the democratic approach, the committee would consider them.

Q: Canceling the word 'guidance' in article No. 61 has been perceived by the opposition as cancellation of monitoring role of the Executive in that the president Authority. What are your comments?

A: Omission of the word you have mentioned will resolve the misunderstanding between the Executive and Legislative powers. I don't think that it is of great importance because it is the parliament that is responsible for legislating and monitoring. Therefore, removal of this word will not affect the parliament's role as a monitor on the state because that can be done through other channels specified in the constitution and the law No. 43, 1973.

Q: Some are of the opinion that extending parliamentary term to 6 years would lead to incidence of corruption among members of the legislative body. Is that likely to hap-

A: The corruptible are not bounded by length of term, be it short or long. I this is an illogical conclusion. The constitutional amendments are meant to secure stability of the legislative base by extending the parliamentary period to 6 years instead of 4. The president has thoughtfully proposed this amendment particularly that the state treasury cannot afford close parliamentary elec-

Q: Don't you think that giving the President a right to dissolve the parliament without a public referendum will tend to narrow the democratic margin?

A: Referendum is not necessary since the parliament and president are elected by the people. The President has the right to dissolve the parliament within the constitutional and legal frameworks. This is important, in my opinion, to effect a balance with the parliament's power to enforce resigna-cannot dissolve the new parliament a second time. It is axiomatic in the democratic system for it depends on the necessity of respecting the people's will whom the constitution considers as sovereign and the source of powers.

Q: Cancellation of article No. 119 means lifting the President's legislative power. In case the parliament is dissolved, don't you think that this will leave the country in a state of constitutional vacuum taking into account the parliament's two-month holiday in addition to Ramadan?

A: Cancellation of the President's power to legislation is a very bold and courageous move in the third world. I think that this step will help enhance democracy in Yemen.

Q: Do you think the presence of appointed Shoura Council sharing powers with an elected parliament will weaken the democratic experi-

A: Changing the Consultative Council into a Shoura Council is to compensate for the lack of qualified and specialized elements that are not there in the parliament. I think this is in favor of democracy. The current Consultative Council consists of a number of opposition leaders and

A: Article 156 makes it very complicated to make any amendments. It is right that the constitution articles must be protected from repeated amendments, but this does not necessitate all those complications specially if amendments are meant to develop means of joint work among the state powers and do not impinge on the reedom is an indispensable imperative sought by peoples of the world. It means the ability of people to be free in their political thought and economic life without being suppressed and oppressed.

Freedom of speech is a basic need for any advanced and democratic society. However, it should be practiced through the right means and be away from all kinds of terrorism, violence and harm to others. Ways of expressing freedom of speech and opinion vary from one society to another.

Our Islamic shareah ensures this essential right in the life of people. Prophet Mohammed urged his followers to discuss his opinions and reports. In addition, the Holy Quran contains many proofs of the necessity to respect others opinions and shun violence in enforcing one's opinion. As regards urging people to express their opinion even before rulers, Prophet Mohammed says in his Hadith "the best jihad is a right word said to a tyrant ruler.'

This can serve as an approach to my survey of the magnitude of freedom allowed in our country as expressed by the official or political newspapers. The survey shall also shed some light on censorship as a barrier preventing many books from seeing light of day. Article 19 of the Yemeni constitution reads: "Everybody has the right to uphold his own opinions. People have the right of freedom of expression. This includes freedom of looking for information, receiving it and transferring it to others." The second part of the above article contains some special limits which are:

- Respect for others' rights

morals, etc.

Editor in chief of Al-Sahwah newspaper Nabeel Assofi perceives freedom of expression as the freedom of information and facts. "Any opinion which is not supported by facts turns newspapers to pieces of legends," he said. He added that tens of shiny and attractive articles were published daily but they lacked information which was compensated by imaginary information. "There is no difference, in this regard among official or political newspapers," he said. "However," he added, " I shall not say that they always lack information, but it is often absent."

In 1998 the government decided to have spokesmen for its institutions. But so far there has been no intention to implement such a decision. Assofi criticized confining information with security offices despite the democratic development. "Opinion is controlled by many limits and this should make us arrange our efforts to move to a better way of expression," he concluded. "Freedom of expression is likely to be absent in official newspapers because they are directed by specific organs. Others have better chance of varieties of opinions," said Saleh Al-Humaidi of Al-Shoura newspaper. This has been even asserted by vice editor-inchief of Al-Raiah newspaper Nabeel Al-Asiadi who added that it was only the personal gains that might have motivated freedom of expression in such papers. However, he does not agree with him in regard to non-governmental newspapers which, he said, were not different.

"Freedom of expression is also hindered by difficulty of having access to information and absence of respect for others' opinion," said Assofi. Supporting this opinion, Al-Asiadi

- Defending national security, order, added the role censorship plays in creating more barriers to expression.

> As far as remedies are concerned he emphasized respect for and belief in sacredness of words and freedom of expression.

Taher Al-Jonaied, head of investigation department for the Al-Meethaq newspaper, mouthpiece of the PGC, said the size of freedom of speech in official as well as opposition newspapers did not match aspiration of both the government and opposition. "There is freedom but it is controlled by some legislation created to protect human rights and prevent any violations of others' freedoms." he said. Misunderstanding freedom of expression is a major problem, explained Al-Jonaid. "Many writers offend people under the pretext of practicing this right," he said.

Aref Assormi from Sana'a Radio confessed to the availability of little freedom. "But it is not enough to accept and encourage opposite party's opinion," he said.

Deputy chairman of YJS Hassan Abdulwarith highlighted available fringe of freedom from two angles:, constitutional laws and what is really implemented. "Constitutional laws provide a good volume of freedom of expression," he said. "But this freedom is sometimes controlled by the different interpretations of such laws by authorities concerned," he added. Although we are better than others in the Arab countries in this regard, the freedom we have is not enough.

He added that unless freedom of expression was given a larger outlet many difficulties would be awaiting both the state and the society. "Freedom of expression helps rulers see centers of corruption in the society," he said.

Revolution Objectives Assessment

Ahmad Al-Wade'e, Lawyer

t is discouraging to compare what has so far been achieved out of the 6 goals announced on the eve of the revolution. The gap between Yemen's realities and those aims is very long. In fact, the gap between our reality and those goals is so wide, that it is comparable to that between Islam during the prophet's era and the Islamic experiment of Afghani Taliban.

Let's have one of those goals as an example. Abolishing differences among classes of the society is one of the six goals that has been turned to be a big hoax. The same can be said about the remainder. This, of course, will raise many important questions. As far as achievements and failures of September 26 revolution are concerned, the issue seems to me far from saying that its achievements have been more or less than its failures. A few years ago, an eminent statesman, Sheikh Abdullah Ben Hussain Al-Ahmar said a few words to 'Al-Wasat' magazine that summed up the long explanation; "The revolution is ours." In my opinion, the most important failure has been the inability of the revolution to prevent the "catholic" marriage between religion and tribe, or between the religious and tribal fanaticism.

For more than 6 years, the revolution went through ups and downs from the next day of its eruption. Therefore, it is difficult to talk about a "revolutionary momentum". The momentum indicates the amount of radical changes in the society's structure effected by the revolution. The revolution was not lacking the will to change but no real chance was left for it for that. On the eve of the revolution's victory in the battle of survival scored at the end of 1967 and beginning of traditional forces including 1968. Sheikhs, religious people, police officers and tribal intellectuals carried out a coup d' état on November 5 under the pretext of restoring the national identity.

The major achievement of the Southern revolution was driving out the colonizers, unifying that part of the country and preparing the citizens to contribute to the whole unity of Yemen which happened in 1990. Without that performance of October 14 revolution and its unity principles there could have been no unity at the time and no continuation of unity after the civil war of 1994.

On the other hand the most outstanding failure was the inability to outline a unity version that could have saved the country the trouble of the civil war of 1994.

Aggravating Poverty problem in Yemen

By Mahyoub Al-Kamali

he rate of poverty in Yemeni society has risen during the last five years in spite of proposals offered by World Bank to the Yemeni government for putting an end to negative aspects of the economic and financial reform program, whose implementation since 1995 has led to a drop in annual per capita income to about $ 250.

The reform policy has affected large segments of the Yemeni 17-million population although the government had taken measures on social protection with the so-called the social security network.

Poverty has become the gravest problem the Yemeni society is suffering from. Lifting governmental subsidies on foodstuffs has redoubled price rates for some commodities by more than 150%. Consequently the purchasing power of Yemeni currency has dropped and rate of unemployment has risen above 35%. This has added to the swelling numbers of the poor.

How the UNDP sees it

In pursuance of the UN policy to fight poverty and deal with its impact in the developing countries, the UNDP (United Nations Development Program) sent a mission to evaluate poverty situation in Yemen It had, in cooperation with government specialists, prepared a working paper containing important proposals about confronting the problem and how to solve it with available potentials.

In August 1996 those suggestions were discussed in a workshop held in Sana'a by the concerned government departments. Discussions resulted in setting important recommendations for curbing the phenomenon of the increasing number of the poor and ending it. But certain other factors had impeded implementation of the recommendations.

The international mission viewed that elimination of poverty in our country is connected with achieving a balanced economic growth, just distribution of income in favor of the poor, creation of jobs, decreasing taxes levied on people of limited income, drawing up programs to expand the social security network and allotting a portion of th resources for development of small enterprises.

The international mission stressed the importance of having representatives of local population groups as partners in establishing special productive projects, part of their cost to be financed locally. Another suggestion related to fixing prices of agricultural products and facilitating their marketing. One of the proposals called for increasing government spending on health and education services in addition to developing the infrastructure. UNDP resident representative expressed the UN willingness to finance $ 45 million worth projects involving poverty elimination in Yemen. Most of the international mission proposals had not been carried

Social experts attribute delay in handling the poverty problems to the government's preoccupation in the policy of economic stabilization and enhanced structural reform without paying due attention to the social dimension in the process of implementation of reform plans. Added to those reasons is the scarcity of financial resources allocated to the program n poverty alleviation in the five-year plan beginning in 1996.

Researchers conclude that economic reforms could not ease impact of taxes and duties imposed on limited income people who have endured greatly due to increase in electricity, water and phone bills as well as in transportation and post fees and prices of oil products.

World Bank Suggestions

In the backdrop of complication of poverty problems and people's objection to the negative effects of the reform program, the World Bank was aware of the volume of the program's impact on the people. Therefore it had suggested that the Yemeni government should establish two funds, one for social development, financed by donor countries and the other for social welfare to be funded by the government. The proposal aims at creating jobs, establishing small projects in poor local communities, cutting unemployment, involvement of all poor groups in social development process and offer of help to widows, orphans and the handicapped.

Poverty challenges

Since its establishment, the social development fund, financially by the World Bank to the tune of $40 million, European Union with $20 million and Holland with $10 million, along with the fund financed projects did not contribute to cutting unemployment rate. Latest official figures indicate that the fund has in the past 3 years implemented 1000 projects costing $81 million. The projects covered areas of education, health and small enterprises that should have been financed by the state budget.

The main purpose of the World Bank suggestion for of establishing a social development fund was to create job opportunities. Projects funded by the state do not create permanent jobs for the unemployed. Since poverty challenges seem to be very serious, dealing with them needs more viable plans.

Solutions to poverty problems provided by the Fund are partial and temporary. The situation requires funding big production projects to improve economic performance and create permanent jobs. To realize this end there must be an expansion in building government and investment projects. They should involve agriculture, industry, tourism and developing handicrafts to create more permanent job opportunities and to increase income of poor families.

Four years after establishment of the social care fund, thousands of families in need of help are still without that promised care without being enlisted in poor groups lists. Authorities concerned claim that the reason was the little financial allocation fixed for the fund. In fact the poor families complain of interference of political agents in categorizing the cases of families.

Aggravating Problem

With insufficient government measures for helping all poor families through the social security network, poverty problem in Yemen seems to be worsening, specially that the social care fund has not been able to meet needs of all poor and handicapped people. These projects mounted by the social development fund have not been able to bring relief to those local poor communities.

According to some researches poverty rates are between 19-41%, 19.9% in towns and 80.1% in the rural areas. This situation requires strategic planning to develop the rural and remote places.

These figures indicate existence of other problems, mainly the difficulty of modernizing a community dominated by an overwhelming majority of poor groups. This requires drawing up a comprehensive national plan to eliminate poverty and to improve the national economy performance in general.

Growing Economic and Commercial Relationships Between Yemen and UAE

emen-UAE good political relations have contributed greatly to enhance the economic and trade relations between the two countries. The assistance offered by Abu Dhabi Fund to finance building vital development projects in Yemen is considered a good example.

After Sheik Zayed Bin Sultan Al-Nahyan, the president of the United Arab Emirate had financed the re-construction of the historical dam of Mareb, on the occasion of the opening ceremony of which he personally participated on the 20th of December 1986, the commercial relations between the two countries have been redoubled. This has expanded the volume of the trade balance through an increase in influx of exported or imported goods into its markets.

According to Sheik Zayed, the Yemeni -Emirates relationships have become a model to be followed by other Arab countries.

After the unity of Yemen in 1990, both economic and trade relations soared by setting a joint committee for upgrading bilateral cooperation in various fields leading to mutual benefit for the two peoples.

The committee has reached many agreements, most important of which are in the economic sector, especially for preventing double taxation, protection of joint investments and consolidation of trade exchange movement between the two countries.

Yemen and the UAE have signed in 1986 an agreement on air transportation which was renewed on the 21st of November 1995. This agreement stressed the cooperation in passenger field and cargo shipment to consolidate tourism and encourage trade exchange. As a result ,the first air route of Emirate airlines to Sana'a from Dubai was inaugurated in October 1996.

Statistics

Loans offered to Yemen by Abu Dhabi fund for development have amounted to 40708 million Derham to finance a number of infrastructure projects.

The Emirates aid for rebuilding Mareb dam reached U.S.$ 105. Other Emirates' contributions are those to develop Aden Port with 3750 million Derham and building power stations at a cost of 23,99 million Derham.

Other agreements

An agreement for cooperation between the ministries of oil and mineral wealth of the tow countries was signed in Abu Dhabi on May 8, 2000. The agreement stipulated encouragement of private sector in both countries to establish joint ventures for exploration and digging oil, gas and other minerals in addition to exchange of information, research and documents related to oil industries.

To conclude, the growing relationships serve the mutual interests of the two countries, of their regional integration and eventually of the whole region.

COMMON SENSE

By: Hassan Al-Haifi

From Monica Lewinsky to the USS Cole:

Don't Rule Out Israel

While many may think such idea as being preposterous, we have discussed some of the methods sometimes used by the Zionist "lobby" in the US, including Monica Lewinsky, in Common Sense (YT 26/6/00 and 10/7/00), but the tactics are not confined to scandalous affairs that merely touch on the passions of the libido, but also include such ingenious tactics as the sinking of the USS Liberty in the Mediterranean, which was casually dismissed as a "mistake" and other cases, like the Pollard spying case, just to name a few. This observer asked many enlightened and well versed Moslem scholars on the legitimacy of operations like the sinking of the USS Cole, if we assume that the US is viewed as a supporter of an enemy. Almost unanimously these Moslem jurists stated that as long as there are peace treaties and "treaties of friendship" between a Moslem nation and the United States, there are no legitimate Islamic grounds for carrying out such operation, as long as the state of war does not exist between the Moslem nation and the United States. Thus, any "Moslem organization" claiming responsibility for such violation of Islamic jurisprudence faces accountability to Allah. It is more likely that such organization is serving the interests of entities or powers that are trying to find ways out of the predicaments they face.

On the other hand, a brief look at the history of Israeli intelligence, will lead to the discovery that they have easily worked against their first sponsors, the British (before Israel had become a "state") by killing their officers and Mandate officials in Palestine, to the point that the British administrators had listed a lot of the soon to become big whigs in the Israeli regime such as Shamir and Begin as "outlaws". They bombed the King David Hotel in Jerusalem, which was packed with British officers. They killed Count Bernadotte, the Secretary General of the United Nations (and may have been behind the death of Dag Hammarshold, another UN Secretary General), in his quest for a peaceful settlement of the Middle East. They have used sex as a means to gain the support of UN officers (see "Soldering for Peace" by Carl Von Horn) and so many illicit and immoral tactics. Thus, while all the possibilities should be studied, even the connections of the Israeli Mosad or some other western intelligence links to so called "Moslem terrorist organizations" should not be ruled out, especially since such quick fly by night organizations as "Mohammed's Warriors" or other conspicuous names, where the only Islamic attribute they have lies in the name only and nothing else.

On the other hand, one should realize that by now Israel is in a very insecure position, as much as the Israelis claim to the contrary. The blows of Hizbullah, which apparently has proven to adhere more positively to Islamic doctrine and principles in effectively waging its holy war against Israel, than any other Moslem organization - if not country - to date. On the other hand, the reliance on western media support and even the political support of several western countries or political organizations is not so easily securable, even with tactics such as Monica Lewinsky and support to political organization (It was surprising to hear George Bush the Younger state that he would "work for a just settlement of the Middle East problem", although one cannot fail to recognize how the American Jewish lobby was infuriated by the recognition of President Bill Clinton that there is a legitimate call for some kind of retribution due to the Palestinians in view of the suffering they have gone through).

An important point to also take into consideration is that during the Cold War, Israel enjoyed the status of the 'policeman of the region for the Western Alliance". With the collapse of the Soviet Union and the emergence of the United States as a global superpower (touched upon by Common Sense on several occasions in the past), it appears that Israel is out looking for some kind of role to justify continued blind American and Western support. Thus Israel and her supporters are seeking to exaggerate the emergence of a "Moslem" threat to Western Civilization and culture and working diligently through clandestine organizations to project the "real dangers" that come from such a threat. That is why one will find most serious minded Moslems generally appalled by the tactics employed by such organizations, which call for the imposition of Moslem jurisdiction, when, in fact, one will find that these organizations are ill versed in real Islamic Law and jurisdiction and often work to project a negative image of Islam thus making them a disservice to Islam.

On the other hand, it is worth mentioning that all things set aside, it is oil that will really take on the role of the pivotal element that shall dictate what American and Western policy in the region should follow, and that an important economic factor as oil will be better protected directly by the United States, as was seen in the Gulf War of 1991. Furthermore, the increasing importance of oil has perhaps lead serious minded American policy makers to seek a more balanced policy that does not seek to encourage alienation of the Arab masses, let alone the Arab regimes.

It then goes without saying that Israel is seeking to regain some important role in the eyes of the Western countries, and to insist that no Arab state can be trusted to even fuel its warships, let alone protect western interests in the area.

In looking at the sophistication of the attack on the USS Cole, it would seem logical, in the wake of setbacks faced by Israel in several fronts, that Israeli intelligence may have considered that a dramatic explosion (the Israelis are well qualified in the area of high explosives going back to the days of the "fight for independence") of the type, which hit the USS Cole, would either cause American and Western policy makers to reconsider any trust they may have developed for the Arab countries, and accordingly reinvigorate the reliability of the Israeli role as the "policeman of the West" in the area, not to exclude other possible reasons, such as blackmail or other armtwisting tactics, which are not unfamiliar to Israeli strategic thinkers.

On the moral implications involved, one would hardly find it difficult to affirm that Israeli adherence to moral factors is not very high on the priority list of Israeli strategists and their Zionist supporters, who live by the motto that the "ends justify the means".

For sure, the US can rule out any Yemeni government involvement or support for such an operation, for Yemeni policy has always been to follow a course that does not seek any animosity with any power, not to mention the lip service support to Arab Furthermore, nationalist causes. Yemen has too many mutual interests at stake with the United States to want to create any reason for animosity with the United States. In fact, most fellow Yemenis that this observer talked with clearly saw no interest for Yemenis to consider such an operation as helpful to Yemen in its present co. This observer is sure that the authorities in the Republic of Yemen will do all in their power, in cooperation with the US investigators to arrive to the real culprit of this crime, which tend to really serve the interests of the enemies of Yemen and the enemies of the Arab nation at large

It is appropriate that this observer should convey to the United States and the families of the victims of this heinous crime our condolences and regrets. We also assure them that the majority of the Yemeni people hide no pride in such a violation of the code of Arab and Islamic hospitality.

Al-Aqsa Summit, Snail-Paced Response

Mohammed Khidhr Yemen Times

It is axiomatic that big crises and events of destiny dictate speedy response and action by all those concerned whether they are leaders or plebeians in a bid to tackle them as soon as possible in avoidance of complicated consequences and losses.

It seems that this rule does not apply to our nation and our leaders. When the bloody events in Al-Aqsa began more that two weeks ago and then spread to other Palestinian areas, accompanied with the most brutal crimes ever committed against defenseless people, the Arab leaders thought it appropriate to hold a summit on 21 of this month. Up to now, tens of Palestinian youths and men fell dead and thousands wounded at the hands of the Israeli army soldiers and army tanks and helicopter gunships shelled various vital Palestinian headquarters of president Yasser Arafat. Nevertheless, the summit has more time to wait as if the situation has not become too serious to deserve a summit and more martyrs and wounded people are still needed and more houses and facilities need be demolished.

One may wonder that if an emergency Arab summit amidst speedily developing tragic events needs such a long time and procedures and preparations to convene, how much time would it be needed for an ordinary one?

What makes things worse and torpedoes even the idea of holding an Arab summit to discuss Al-Aqsa uprising and the massacres that entailed it at the hands of Zionists, is that the Palestinian leader has agreed to attend a regional summit blessed by the United States to be held ahead of the Arab summit. The said summit aims in the first place to reward Israel for its recent crimes and force the Palestinian leadership to submit to the U.S. and other parties will to sit to the negotiating table with the Israelis whose hands are still carrying blood of the innocent people of Palestine. The Palestinians have to accept what has happened as a punishment for their protest against the desecrating visit by the notorious terrorist Sharon to the Holy Aqsa mosqu and to submit to the settlement conditions dictated by Israel and the U.S., the so-called sponsor of "peace" and defender of "human rights" in the ducation is the backbone of societies' development. It is the corner-stone for progress and advancement. It is not surprising, then, when countries give it top priority. States are highly aware of its importance in building a solid basis for their sustainable development and consequently achieving the welfare of the societies.

Education, Where to?

In our case, there has been a commendable emphasis on education since the revolution. One of the main goals of the revolution was to eradicate illiteracy and enhance people's education. Therefore, there has been a general awareness among the people that it is a key and effective factor for improving their conditions. However, as time passed, the education system started deteriorating. Corruption found its way to spoil many of its institutions. In the midst of such an atmosphere, many students started shrugging shoulders at the utility of education. "I can get the grade I want, I can get the certificate I want with my money.", as some may boast. This attitude has made these students take education casually, and never seriously bother about learning and acquiring knowledge. This is a hazardous development paving the way for an illiterate, ignorant generation in years to come.

Another factor that has weakened education system is the ignorance and carefree attitude of the state institutions concerned with education. They started abandoning their commitment to this vital issue. Despite the fact that good education is highly stressed upon and ensured in our constitution, what happens in reality is completely a different matter. The state seems to lose interest and is withdrawing itself from this sacred right of the people. Facilities, funds provided were very limited and could hardly match with the times. Some schools lack even the basic amenities for education process such as chairs, boards, etc. Let alone other facilities that came as a result of the advanced technology taking place world- wide.

Administrations of private schools, universities and institutes usually violate the rules and conditions upon which they have established those institutes because of the weak supervision by the relevant state establishments. Added to all that is the economic crisis that has a considerable negative impact on the people. Eventually, many people find it almost difficult to teach their children. Some can't afford fees of registration, let alone fulfill other requirements such as books, uniforms, and all that stuff. Now a great number of students are biting the bullet as the university tuition fees skyrocketed from 2500 to 6000 riyals. This was actually a reckless measure that will certainly demolish the education process. While other countries are competing to fight computer and internet illiteracy, more than 70% of our society are still plagued with illiteracy. Many students find themselves helpless at such an oppressive decision which has closed all doors before them for achieving higher education.

Students have kept their side of the bargain through peaceful means in terms of staging demonstrations protesting against this tyrannical decision. Finally, they were forced to take the issue to the court. However, after winning the case, our officials remained bull-headed, unwilling to abide by the verdict. Those who are supposed to give a good example in respecting judiciary decisions, do reject them depending on their influential positions.

Where shall these students turn to? How much will the country lose by losing those who have interest and determination to study?

Many question marks pop up foretelling of hard times to come.

Now Some students have already lost hope and turned to the streets looking for whatever jobs to take up. Others are still between the devil and the deep blue sea knowing not of what is in store for them.

The funny thing is that in the past we used to cherish slogans made by authorities such as "By the year 2000, education will be for all." However, it seems that they were deceptive ones and are in reality "By the year 2000, streets for all."

By and large, this is unjust. The Yemeni people have suffered a lot and were patient enough.

38 years have passed since the revolution broke out and still majority of the people are illiterate. Furthermore, the situation seems to worsen rather than get better. Therefore, it is only advisable that our decision-makers do reconsider this issue. The point is "Is anybody listening?"

Letters to the Editor

You are kindly requested to address your correspondence and press contributions directly on the name of the Chief Editor

DEAR EDITOR,

I am incredibly happy that there is an English-based newsletter in Yemen, especially one with which I can correspond. I dearly hope that you answer this letter, as communication is the only way to friendship between any two peoples. I'm as American as one can get. I have family that date back to the civil war and revolutionary war as well in America, a time in which we too were threatened by an over-seas force. Now at the end of the 20th century with my own eyes I have also seen horrible prejudice and crimes against humanity itself. First, in living with racial issues between blacks and whites in the late 1970's in America and now with the Islamic-Jewish relations world-wide.

I can not count the number of Jewish and Muslim friends that I have. All are great people. Even here in America, where Palestinian and Israeli's live and work together, there is a strong friction between the two people.

I do not understand why! Both sides want to fight against the pain that has been inflicted on them. But who do you fight?! Random people? Just pick a Muslim if you're a Jew, or a Jew if you're a Muslim and start to kill one another? How can you possibly hope to find the exact person who is responsible for Al-Aqsa? Conversely, how could the people who bombed USS Cole be found? I can tell you that my Palestinian friend here in America is innocent, and that I had nothing to do with Al-Aqsa. Moreover, I am abhorred by both acts! CNN has hinted that Osama bin Laden is likely to be the person backing the bombing. I assure you that if he were in front of me now I would not lay a hand on the man. I would instead invite him to my home with my family for dinner and talk until I felt that he knew me and that I understood him. At that point there's no way that we could possibly dislike each other. Honestly, how could he possibly be a dislikeable person? Look at all of his followers! This is not a person who would kick a dog, or abandon hungry children. If he were born in America, he might be my neighbor, and if I were born in Yemen I would be trying to bomb the next USS Cole. And in 60 years, we will all be dead. My children will live in America, his will live in the middle east, and if we continue the propaganda and hatred, both of our families will suffer.

I don't like how Israel has suppressed the Palestinians, nor do I blame them for fighting back with bombs and rocks. After all, what is the difference between someone who kills with a homemade bomb and someone who fires a 3 million dollar missile from 60 kilometers away? Both are inflicting terror, and if there is no definite plan (no means to an end) then it is not war but terrorism on both accounts. As far as I can see, both sides are terrorists because both of their actions do not point towards an end of the violence. So what is the answer? Communication.

We (yes, you and I) as well as Jews and Muslims need to communicate with each other on a personal level. Luckily, the tool for this is sitting right in front of you. So, I hope you send me an email.

DEAR EDITOR,

I am sure I speak for the majority of Americans when I say that we do not hold your country responsible for the horrific and cowardly act of a few. The United States obviously is a country of many, we are a diversified land, with citizens from every ethnicity, and social and economic backgrounds and I am sure the majority of us feels this way.

Thank you for your time.

DEAR EDITOR

AS an American citizen I am trying real hard to understand why the ship in Aden harbor was sabotaged. I fail to see what this accomplishes other than antagonizing a sleeping giant.

I think I am an average American and pray for peace everywhere. Because I am ignorant I do not fully understand all that happens in the world of Yemen, but want to learn. Please know most Americans wish you no harm and want peace and prosperity for you and Yemen's people. I wish you well and hope to hear from you or your readers soon.

Independent Media, Tool of Change

important role in the development process of any society. It can lead the torch of change. In fact, there is a considerable mutual consistency between democracy and media. That is, the role of media particularly in the democratizing countries is relatively significant. This is why the Jemstone Network is targeting such countries to raise awareness about the role of media in the development process. The Jemstone organized in cooperation with the Yemen Times a workshop on Independent Journalism last week in Sanaa. The workshop was financed by the Dutch Insister for Development and Cooperation and was inaugurated by the new Dutch Ronhaar. The events of the workshop took place at Shahran Hotel.

Mohammed Hatem Al-Qadhi, Yemen Times Managing Editor met the organizer and the participants and filed the following short interview.

Mazen Shwoori, a translator and an editor in the Syrian Arab News Agency, talked about his impressions and said "For me the workshop was the first ever workshop I have attended. It was very useful for me in terms of obtaining new skills and experi-

We discussed lots of subjects such as the press law in Yemen and how journalists can make a better use of it in getting more rights. We also talked about different topics related to ways of having access to information, how write interesting news stories attracting readers' attention."

Mr. Tudor Lomas, director of Jemstone said "This is the first workshop that we have organized in Yemen and we are enlightened with the way it's gone. We have had commitment, interest, involvement from the journalists here. Far from knowing the media scene here, we were apprehensive at the beginning about the way it would go. We run similar workshops in Jordan, Egypt and we have the plan for one in Gaza soon. Then, the idea was mooted to come to Yemen to look at the issues of independent journalism, and what is good journalism.

May be we'll look into investigative commitment have been very great. Participants came from different institutions, different newspapers, TV, > radio, etc. So the workshop comprised the whole range of the media. There is a real interest in improving the media. It is exciting to come across this. We had immense support. This workshop has been supported by the Dutch Minister of Development

Collaboration. They have a program operating within the middle East region to increase interest in issues of free media, try to encourage more democracy and more involvement of people in socio-economic development. That is part of the program that is carrying on and we hope to carry on with them as well. The new Dutch Ambassador to Yemen has been extremely supportive and he said at the beginning of the workshop that if we could come up with other proposals, or more correctly, if the media in Yemen can come up with proposals for training and development of the media, he would be extremely sympathetic to these ideas. Last night we had a long, thorough discussion with colleagues, Ambassador and his colleagues about some of the ideas that we might be able to consider. The group here is keen about the follow-up workshop. I think we laid the ground- work here, but I would like to do some work on issues of developing stories, how to write researches and how to find out facts. It's not easy to find facts and this is applicable to every country. It needs commitment, hard work and experience from the journalists. Doa'a al-Kadri, al-Ayam Newspaper, Some of the people here have experienced a lot. However, they lack the opportunity to share their experience. So the idea is to share experiences from other countries. This time we brought with us to the workshop Mr. Yaya Shokair, a very good journalist from Jordan. We have another participant from Syrian Arab News Agency with his experi-Editor of the Guardian Newspaper, Brian Whitaker. He's been long interested in Yemen and is very much experienced in investigative journalism. Besides, the local lawyers and local correspondents from al-Jazira. All are willing to have their experiideas discussed and searched through. I think if you talk to the participants, I am delighted how enthusiastic they still are after four long days of hard work. Mr. Mohammed al-Dailami, Saba News Agency, said "During the four days we have acquired all that is new and applied in international journalism. Many people used to think that journalism is a career and not a mission. Those working in the field of journalism should be very committed and interested in journalism. All the participants have been exposed to the elements that makes a good journal-

We hope that such workshops will be continued and will be organized in future. I also hope that there will be some connection network between journalists."

Yahya Shuqair, from Jordan, said "This is my first time to come to Yemen to participate in this workshop. It was such a lovely opportunity to come here to see the condition of press freedom in the participants' countries. I have come out with a good vision about press freedom in Yemen and the legal framework. Some Yemeni lawyers gave a vivid picture of the legal framework. I observed that there are many rights for journalists that might be asserted if they always refer

There are some rights that journalists are not aware of. When their rights are violated, they seem only to complain and that is not enough. They do not refer to the law to take their rights. For example, the law stipulates that they have a right to have access to information. Therefore, they must have access to information. If the government refuses this right, journalists should refer to the law. So I do encourage Yemeni journalists to push themselves and work within the law. They should also try their best to make connection network with Yemeni lawyers."

said "I have benefited by getting a lot of new ideas pertaining to independent journalism from this workshop. We have attended interesting and exciting discussions with Jemstone director Mr. Tudor who highlighted the importance of objectivity and precision in good journalism."

Khalid al-Anssi, lawyer who has already taken up many cases related to the press, said "It was such a wonderence. We have the Middle East ful time to be here and listen to the lecturers. I was nominated by Mr. Mohammed Naji Allaw who was supposed to participate in the workshop. However, he was busy preparing the procedures to travel to a conference on human rights in Morocco. I have understood much about the difficulties of journalists and the press here in Yemen. I have also shared the experience to be questioned, to have ence of other qualified people in the field of journalism. I have also provided the participants with my experience. I tried to explain the legal framework according to the law looking for some solutions to the problems of journalists. We also pointed out that there are some issues that are not settled by law.

I believe that this workshop will help and they are still there. They me a lot as a human rights developcame back the next day for ment awareness activist. It will also help me when dealing with issues of human rights in a newspaper that we are going to publish as a part of the ing to me that it should have human rights association activities in which I am a member."

World Food Day and Telefood Celebration

n the occasion of celebrating the World Food Day which falls on the 16th of October, the people of the world should be alarmed of the problem of food security. The motto for this year is a millennium free from hunger. But in practice we find lots of people starving on a daily basis. Our question should be: will this motto come to reality and everybody all around the world no longer will feel hungry. On this occasion, Ismail Al-Ghabery of the Yemen Times met with Dr. Mohammed Bazza, FAO Representative interim in Sana'a and filed the following interview.

Q: Why the FAO celebrates this occasion?

A: The World celebrates the World Food Day and Telefood today of every year which coincides with the founding of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) in 1945.

It is an occasion to assess the results and outputs of the efforts made by the international community at all levels, to alleviate food shortage and its effects, particularly hunger, on the affected populations. At the same time, it is an opportunity for planning future activities and for readjusting policies and programs aimed at combating poverty and hunger. It is also a day of information and awareness creation about food insecurity, at all levels.

In 1996, FAO prepared and hosted the World Food Summit which was attended by more than 185 countries at the level of Heads of States; it is the largest and most important event on food security that the world has known. During this summit, the international community made a firm commitment to reduce by half the number of hungry people by the year 2015. At that time, it was estimated that some 800 million people go to bed without having had enough to eat; thus the goal set by the World Food Summit was to reduce this number to a maximum of 400 million by the year 2015. To attain this objective, affected countries agreed to elaborate and implement strategies and action plans aimed at combating poverty and improving the living conditions of hungry people. Similarly, developed countries committed themselves to assist low income, underdeveloped countries in this regard.

The United Nations considers access to adequate food a universal human right and collective responsibility. Food security is defined by FAO as "access by all people at all times to the food needed for a healthy and active life." It is achieved when the following three conditions are met: Sufficiency, Stability and Access. Sufficiency means that there is enough food for all the population, Stability means that food supplies are relatively stable and do not fluctuate much in time and/or in space, whereas Accessibility means that all those in need of food can obtain it.

Q: Kindly shed some light on the theme of this year's World Food Day celebration?

A: The theme of this year's World Food Day celebration is "A Millennium Free from Hunger." With the start of a new millennium, the aim is to eradicate hunger and achieve the goal of "food for all" early in the millennium and to keep the wold free of hunger throughout the millennium.

Infantile Paralysis Eradication

he first three-day round of the fifth national campaign for Infant Paralysis eradication has been concluded. The campaign aimed at vaccinating four million children under five years. Sixteen thousand health employee and volunteers helped in this campaign distributed among five thousand fixed and mobile centers.

Since 1996, the Republic of Yemen has achieved considerable success in implementing its health plan for of virus eradication. Now Yemen has a distinguished place among the countries of East Mediterranean for being free from this disease. This proves the sincerity of the Republic of Yemen to implement the international agreement for children's rights. The ministry of health has made this vaccine free to every child and built a national center for monitoring epidemic ailments. By doing this Yemen has earned the respect and appreciation of international health organizations and donating countries and it is about to get an international health certificate for the eradication of Infantile Paralysis disease.

Through this celebration, and as stated in the Director General's speech for this year, "FAO is inviting individuals together with world leaders, civil society organizations, private corporations, foundations, farmers and other grassroots groups, to join the Organization in the fight against hunger and malnutrition".

TeleFood is another program that FAO has developed during the past years which is linked to World Food Day. On the occasion of World Food Day, FAO organizes, with the help of celebrities, cultural activities aimed at raising funds that are used later for alleviating the burden of food shortage and hunger. The use of these funds is through small projects developed for and implemented by small communities of vulnerable people and with their participation, in work or in kind, to improve their living conditions.

Q: Could you outline the support the FAO offers to help Yemen fight

Rift Valley Fever (RVF)? A: Before talking about the RVF, it is probably worth mentioning that the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) has a very important program for combating transboundary animal diseases and ultimately eliminating them on the medium term. These diseases which include the Rift Valley Fever, rinderpest and several other infectious diseases can pose a serious threat to the economy and food security of a whole region as they can reach the epidemic form in a very rapid manner. Because they know no frontiers or political boundaries, these diseases can be controlled only if there is a very good coordination among neighboring countries of the measures taken. And of course, Yemen is involved in the program developed by FAO for the

Regarding the Rift Valley Fever, FAO has worked in close coordination with the Ministry of Agriculture and Irrigation to fight this dangerous disease from the very early stages of its start in Yemen. As soon as the early symptoms of the disease were observed in the field by the Ministry of Agriculture and Irrigation, FAO was informed and fielded immediately a very high level international consultant. The latter was incorporated into a large team established jointly by the Ministry of Agriculture and Irrigation and the Ministry of Health, in cooperation with the World Health Organization, FAO and other partners. The team elaborated an urgent action plan and started its implementation immediately. Activities included survey and reconnaissance of the infected areas, assessment of the importance of the infection, taking of blood and serum samples for laboratory analysis, spraying of products, and several others activities. The work of the team was in fact supervised by H.E. the Minister of Agriculture and Irrigation in person who accompanied it for several days, during the onset of the disease.

Upon return to Sana'a early this week, the Consultant briefed Government officials on the situation which is very much under control now. He also made important recommendations on the need for assistance to overcome the consequences of the disease and on ways to prevent or at least reduce the risks of its coming back in the future.

This is an example of how good cooperation between two ministries and the assistance of two organizations of the United Nations system as well as other partners, can produce its fruits in a rapid manner and prevent catastrophe.

Q: Give us some ideas about the programs the FAO give to Yemen.

A: Let me first introduce FAO and its mission to those who are not very familiar with it. Created in 1945, FAO's aim is to improve the level of food production and nutrition conditions, to strengthen the capacity of member countries for agricultural production and to improve the living conditions of the rural population. Today, it is the largest and most important organization of the United Nations system specialized in the fields of Agriculture, Forestry, Fisheries and rural development. Its member countries number 180 in addition to the European Union.

In Yemen, FAO has been active since the early fifties. During the past five years, the program of FAO in Yemen has been - and continues to be - one of the largest in the world. The Organization provides assistance to and works in close cooperation with the Ministry of Agriculture and Irrigation, the Ministry of Fish Wealth and other institutions such as the National Water Resources Authority, etc. The program of FAO in Yemen encompasses a wide range of fields, particularly policy formulation and institutional building, agriculture, water resources, environmental protection, desertification control, fisheries, rural development, poverty alleviation, etc.

The aim of FAO is to strengthen the capacity of national institutions and organizations through the assistance it provides for elaborating policies, strategies and plans as well as for implementing projects and activities. Specific project areas where FAO is currently involved include:

- Water use in Agriculture. The aim is to improve the productivity of water used by farmers for irrigating crops, to induce water conservation and to reduce losses of this precious resource.
- Improvement of crop production and protection. The aim is to increase productivity of all food and forage crops through a variety of ways and means, particularly the introduction of new technologies adapted to the conditions of the country and the betterment of local technologies.
- Integrated watershed management. The aim is to develop integrated or holistic approaches to natural resources development, use and protection at the level of a watershed or hydrologic basin.
- Desertification control. The aim is to stop the degradation of natural resources and its ultimate stage of desertification from which it becomes quasi-impossible and cost prohibitive to return to normal. Sand dune stabilization is also another form of desertification control.
- Fisheries development. The aim is to develop sustainable fishing management and production as a source of food production.
- Poverty alleviation and the betterment of living conditions for rural population. The aim is to improve food production and security for the poor rural population.
- Several other areas.

Q: What are the priorities of FAO programs?

A: It is worth mentioning at this stage that some cross cutting issues are the concern of FAO and are at the forefront of its policy. In particular, the exploitation and use of natural resources in a way that ensures their sustainability for future generations as well as the protection of the environment are given priority. Food security and poverty alleviation is yet another issue that is incorporated in most if not all projects and activities. In this regard, vulnerable groups such as the extreme poor and women in rural areas are given priority both in the programs and in the advocacy by the organization for these groups.

Q: Any last comments?

A: I would like to thank the Yemeni Government in general and our partners in the endeavor of working toward improving food production and security in Yemen in particular. On behalf of FAO, I would like to express my thanks specifically to the Ministry of Agriculture and Irrigation with all its institutions; the Ministry of Fish Wealth, the Ministry of Planning and Development, all other public institutions and organizations as well as non governmental and civil organizations with whom we share common aims and objectives.

The road to reaching our common, noble goals is long and tedious but not impossible. Together and armed with willingness, desire to do always better, confidence in ourselves and good faith ue to the ever-increasing demand for water for developing industry, agriculture and civil life, it is quite significant to look for new water resources so as to draw up policies that ensure people's survival. As ground water constitutes a great deal of these resources, it is essential to dig wells.

A workshop was organized on October 2 by National Authority for Water and Sanitation in cooperation with GTZ. 24 engineers from different departments of the authority participated in this workshop. For three consecutive days, these people were discussing the working agenda which included ways to dig new wells, necessary tools, specifications and standards that are to be carried out, maintaining and re-qualifying old wells, reasons behind low productivity of wells, reasons behind the breaking down of pumps, anticipated natural and man-related obstacles etc.

Dr. Mohammed A. al-Sa'adi indicated in his speech that many a time farmers came across serious obstacles such as buying pumps with no good specifications. He said that could be easily avoided if they asked for consultation. Moreover, many farmers do not know how to deal with these pumps.

Mr. Ibrahad Wolf, German team director in Water Establishment, delivered a speech in which he briefly indicated some ways to clean and maintain wells. However, the point about wells of Tehama was that those wells were dug eight years ago. Besides, there was not much information about those wells. He stated that these problems reflect themselves on other governorates.

Mr. Jamál Mohammed Abdu, chairman of the General Authority for Water Resources, indicated that this study will be the basis for understanding all the problems related to water and help in exchange of information in this context.

Finally, Engineer Mohammed al-Himsi and Othman al-Kurdi delivered speeches in which they discussed some relevant problems with the participants so as to find solutions that would save them the trouble of wasting time and money.

vo-hundred thirty-six publishing houses have participated in the 17th Book Fair held in Sana'a on 1-12 October, 2000 displaying more than 100,000 book titles, including new publications. Fifteen countries participated in the fair. The fair was permeated with holding scientific, literary and art symposiums and poetry evenings. The volume of visitors to the book fair has amounted to tens of thousands. In order to convey an account of the fair we have interviewed some representatives of the participating countries sounding out their opinions on the importance of the fair and its reflection on cultural cooperation and the relationships between the Arab coun-

We met Mr. Abdul-Muhsen Abdullah Al Al-Sheikh, representative of the Saudi Arabia Ministry Higher Education in the Agency of the Ministry of Cultural Affairs. He expressed his happiness for his country's participation in the fair, saying that the Saudi Bookshop of King Abdul Aziz is also taking part. He said that book fairs help to consolidate scientific and cultural exchange between Arab countries. Our coming to Sana'a drove us to participate because here there are government institutions participating by only exhibiting books, not selling. There are more than eight Saudi publishing houses. In Saudi Arabia we urge the government publishing houses and institutions to take part in book fairs to consolidate the scientific and cultural exchange between Saudi Arabia and Yemen. The Ministry of Higher Education chairs the Committee of Foreign Books Fairs in case we are invited to participate in any we talk to the government authorities and institutions as well as universities and urge them to do so. He added that "this is the second time the Kingdom participates in a book fair in Yemen and the Saudis still love the Yemenis and there is still is a large Yemeni Community in Saudi Arabia as they are our brothers in Islam." There were many students, who studied in Saudi Arabia, visited the Saudi pavilion in the fair expect the visit of such large numbers with one another and appreciated the idea of holding symposiums on different activities. Mr. Al Al-Sheik said, "There should be many activities like this, particularly a Saudi week in which Saudi poetry is recited and lectures are given. The Yemeni people know much about Saudi singers and writers. We, Saudis, are very proud of Yemen and the Yemeni people. We hope that this cultural exchange will continue and I am confident that the two leaderships will work on strengthening this exchange at all levels." He concluded that the books in the fair are only for exhibition and free distribution and Saudi Arabia helps publishing houses by giving them discount by 50% out of freight tariffs.

Othman Mohammed Ahemd, a supervisor of the Omani pavilion in the fair from the Ministry Omani National Heritage and Information, said," We are pleased to be representatives in the first participation in the Book Fair in Yemen. It is the first time in the history of relationships between the two countries we take part with this pavilion exhibiting the Ministry publications that are on national heritage and Omani culture. Most of these publications are related to the Omani heritage and the old Omani manuscripts some of which of religion and some on literature and poetry as well as some books written by Omani writers who wrote about the history, and historical sites in Oman." He added that though that was the first participation, it was a good thing to achieve it. "We believe that these publications are the most valuable Omani ones. During our stay in Yemen we found that the Yemeni readers were desirous to know about these publications and we were also surprised at their previous knowledge about these publications and of their authors. We hope to participate in the next fair, the Ministry of Heritage and the Omani publishing houses."

Ahmad Al-Sality, from the Cultural Council for Arts in Qatar, said, " Qatar participates in book fairs since they were first held in Yemen, I think since the beginning of 1987 in Sana'a University until now. I was and civilized people and I did not numbers of people to the fair. Despite the bad economic conditions of people, their coming is still large and they are yearning either to buy or to read. There is a big cultural exchange between Qatar and Yemen. We have a book fair in Qatar to be held in two months time. Our representation in the Book Fair was modest but we preferred to attend because of the cultural exchange between Qatar and Yemen. Most of the books we are exhibiting are not for sale; they are only to make the Yemeni people know about Qatar."

Salman Naser Farag, a representative of Kuwait pavilion in the Fair, said, "By our participation we are more interested in enhancing cultural exchange with Yemen and familiarizing Yemeni readers with publications about Kuwait and this is our first participation as Ministry of Information and publicity. It is just the beginning. Such fairs, culture exchanging, visits, symposiums must be repeated and reinforced. This should be the basis for acquainting the people of each country with one another. Welfare and love must prevail between us.

M u n a Mohammed Youbiah, manageress of the Cultural Department Fund in the Egyptian Ministry

Information and representative of the Supreme Council of the Egyptian Culture in the fair, said, "This is the second official participation for us in Yemen. We participate with a project that the Supreme Council for Information in Egypt carries out. It is the National Translation Project that translates what is newly published in the world from different languages in deferent fields of knowledge, e.g. Art, Literature, Health , History..etc. We also participate with a collection of books written by Egyptian writers." She also said that the Fair came as a very good opportunity to introduce other Arab cultural works to the Yemeni people and familiarize the

Yemenis with the most important publications about other countries. She concluded that it was also a good chance to give publicity to Arab publications in other countries and to the personal physician of Imam Badr and came to Sanaa in 1961. He worked at Mutawakel Hospital, later Republican Hospital in Sanaa from 1961-1965 and 1967-71. He tells us of his first impressions upon arriving in Yemen and his life under the Imamate and later the Republic.

It was in March 1961 when I first landed on the shores of Aden with my young wife and my two sons, Mario and Maximo. A month before I had received an offer from the Yemeni government to work in the only hospital in Sanaa, the Mutawakel hospital and to attend to the needs of Imam Badr, Crown Prince at the time, and the royal court. From Aden we were driven up to Taiz on a bumpy road covered with rocks, gravel and sand.We arrived in Taiz after sunset, and as was the custom at the time, the city gates had already been closed. After much arguing and deliberating, our driver managed to convince the guard that I was the Italian physician who had come on orders of Imam Ahmad. The gates were finally thrown open and we were taken to a guest house, Dar El Diafa. At the time there were no hotels in Yemen. The main cities had guesthouses, which were run by the government and were only open to special guests, officials of the government and dignitaries. Next morning we were taken to the airport to continue our journey by plane to Sanaa, but we were dumbfounded when we were turned back. We tried to board the plane the following day to Sanaa with the same result. Nobody was able to give us an explanation. This went on for about two weeks. Every day we would get ready: children, luggage and all and make our way to the airport only to be turned back. When we finally did manage to get on board we were told that there had been an attempt on the life of Imam Ahmad in Hodeidah and that was what had caused the delay in flight permission. Yemeni internal flights in those days served very much as a means of transportation for the mass of the people, as the road network was very inadequate, and I found it very amusing to see goats and sheep in the back of the plane and fish dangling from the ceiling happily moving right and left, back and forth, in communion with the plane's movements.In Sanaa we were settled in a beautiful villa in the proximity of the hospital. Our two young boys adapted very quickly to their new life. I still remember how excited they were when years later they got two horses

Ahmar. Marco and Maximo joined the Italian school, which in reality was nothing more than an Italian teacher brought in from Eritrea to tutor the few children of the Italian community. Later on the school expanded to take in Yemeni children who intended to continue their studies in Italy.In Sanaa my main means of transportation to the hospital was the horse. At the entrance a guard used to greet me ceremoniously with a trumpet and in response to the resounding sound of the instrument, the gates were immediately thrown wide open. Some time later I used the bicycle and then we acquired a second-hand car that was shipped from Italy. My wife, a stunning beautiful young woman, caused quite a stir in town by being the first woman to drive a car in Sanaa. I still have a letter from a US news agency asking me for a photo of my wife driving in Yemen. We were a rather diverse group of doctors working at the Mutawakel hospital then; there were Russians, Yugoslav, East German and Iraqi doctors among others. It was a rather nice working environment except for the "thieves". There were so many crows in Sanaa in those days. The kitchen of the hospital was in an annex, so that the staff had to carry the food through the garden, and it was not uncommon that one of these birds would seize the opportunity to dive into the tray and fly off with chicken leg.Italy had always had good relations with Yemen, being the first country that recognized it after it broke away from the Ottoman Empire. The Imams on the other hand always valued Italian friendship as they saw it essential to counter British policy in the south. In September 62, Imam Ahmad died and it was just a few days before the revolution that two Ministers of Legation came from Italy, the former Minister and his successor to present their condolences to Imam Badr on the death of his father and extend their support to the new Imam. At the time, it must be said, there was no Italian Embassy in Sanaa, only an office which was called the Ministry of Legation. It was on the night of the 25th of September, when we were at a party of the Italian community that there was a blackout all of the sudden and gunfire could be heard all over town. Imam Badr fled that same night through the garden of his palace. The coup had started. I had been very lucky, as I was supposed to have in the palace that night to examine the wife of the Imam who had been ill. Fortunately, the car that was supposed to pick me up never came from the palace and so I escaped the

r. Mario Livadiotti as a gift from Sheikh Abdallah al of it all. The coming weeks were not very pleasant as the revolutionaries were hunting down all supporters of the Imam and killing was common. Many bodies were hung from Bab el Yemen and thrown in the streets of the city. I saw many of my close acquaintances dead. The Imam still made several attempts to regain power, which culminated in the siege of 1969. There were some shortages of food, but otherwise we lived through it rather well and bravely. As a physician working for the government hospital I was not personally touched by the revolution and continued my work unaffectedly. It was only stressful at times when I was the only doctor in town.It was during those months that something very bizarre happened. We woke up one morning with Sanaa covered in snow. The locals reacted to it in a very curious way. They asked, they watched, they inquired, they walked on it barefoot, but they couldn't figure out what that white, fluffy substance was. When I asked some of the older people, they told me that they had never ever seen this is their lives

> I left Yemen in 1965, worked in Tanzania for two years and returned to work here for another period of time between 1967-71. When the time came to leave, my children and wife were very unhappy and attempted to undermine the eminent move in every possible way. Marco and Maximo schemed and amused themselves with 'stealing' my mail when they thought it could contain a potentially threatening job offer. It took me quite a while until I realized what they were plot-

Since we left, I have returned quite frequently to Yemen and observing things around me, now in the year 2000, I must say that progress and change came very quickly to this country. I do sometimes get very sad when I see old palaces and houses destroyed or inadequately renovated. The architecture of this city is so unique that I think it should be preserved at all costs. Sanaa is a world heritage. Today when I passed in front of the big building, which is now the Republican hospital, I still saw reflected in my mind the one story Mutawakel Hospital where I saw so many patients almost four decades ago. I found it funny when the guard at the entrance barred my way pompously asking me what I wanted. The image of the guard blowing the trumpet when I arrived every morning on my horse and the gate being flung wide open to welcome me, came back to my mind. In front of me, cars were busily hooting and honking and racing up and down Zubeiri Street.

ramatic developments of Al-Aqsa uprising and fierce clashes between the Zionist occupation forces and the Palestinian Mujahidin and the surging waves of Arab and Moslem peoples wrathful attitudes are still dominating this week's Yemeni press coverages and news headlines. These events and developments have been front-paged in almost all Yemeni newspapers of this week. Weekend news of the explosions in the U.S Navy destroyer at Aden seaport and in the British Embassy building in Sanaa have also been headlined in Yemeni press.

Here is a review of the main headlines on front pages of Yemeni newspapers of this week.

Despite the many domestic questions and matters that need being tackled and having the priority of interest by Yemeni press, the magnitude and speedy developments in the Palestinian occupied territories and the unprecedented brutality of the Zionists crimes against the defenseless Palestinians have topped the themes of press editorials and writings. In addition top focusing on the bloody events in Palestine the Yemeni press has also tackled some very important local political and social problems.

Excerpts from articles and commentaries published in some Yemeni newspapers of this week.

An-Nass comments on the bloody events in occupied Palestine. In an article in its backpage the newspaper says the Arab masses swallow their grief and take part in massive demonstrations and the Arab regimes take part in protest and denunciation statements and call for an unagreed upon urgent Arab summit. The US calls for self-restraint and return to negotiations without referring to stopping the Israeli tanks, planes and missiles and the army. The UN holds deliberations on drafting a resolution in which the big powers are keen not to condemn Israel, calling for immediate return to negotiations. The Israeli forces are in the mean time are intensifying their aggressive military campaign against the civilian Palestinians in a random way not differentiating between men, women, children and elderly people. Among features of all this image nothing is seen clearly but the Intifada and its people which will always remain victorious.

AL-MITHAQ weekly, organ of the People's General Congress party "PGC", October 9, 2000.

An article published in the paper on the situation in occupied Palestine wondered about what the Arab leaders are waiting for happening against the people of Palestine more than what is befalling them now. What are they waiting for before convening at the same table to face the conspiracies machinated against a vital part of the Arab homeland and their sanctities? What they have to urgently do is to adopt a stand embodying the Arab nation's aims and hopes restoring to the nation her stature and dignity. Would the Arab leaders be able to disentangle themselves from the inferiority complex and feeling of weakness and exaggerating their enemy's strength in case of confronting it?

The ongoing Israeli massacres against the Arab people of Palestine have disclosed falsity of the peace scenario and refuted allegations of the Zionist entity and claims of its keenness on peaceful coexistence. The massacres have proved to he whole world this entity's bloody tendency and racial policy based on displacement and annihilation of the Palestinian people.

AL-UMMA weekly, October 12, 2000

In one of its articles on the Palestinian bloody events the paper has said that with the ongoing carnages against the Palestinians, Israel wants to transfer the conflict of negotiations on Al-Quds and change the settlement process into a a real bloody conflict which it had already begun the moment it had usurped Al-Quds in 1967.

There are many UN resolutions demanding Israel's withdrawal from from Palestine, but have not been implemented because the American administration follows a double standard policy.

The article says that the Arabs can and should now demand of halting the defeatist negotiations till the return of all the occupied territories, Al-Quds and all the Palestinian refugees to their homes.

The newspaper's editorial has said that the United States must realize that the will of peoples and dignity represent the characteristic of their being alive on their land. It must also comprehend that the Arabs have contributed to the world with civilizations and other humanitarian roles. The Arabs have proved throughout humanity history that they are among the best who are keen on peoples interests

Since the international changes in 1990, the Arabs have been dealing with the language of the alleged peace with the Zionist enemy despite their outright belief that the Zionist enemy is hostile to humanity and does not know a single alphabet of the language of peace. America should remember how the American people have dealt with those who occupied them, although they were of the same culture as theirs.

The Arabs have many times warned against the danger of the American absolute alignment with the Zionist enemy and their support for it in the most brutal terroristic practices against the defenseless civilian Palestinians. The notorious terrorist Sharon's visit to the holy Aqsa mosque has ignited a Zionist neo-Nazist war against the Palestinian people. Therefore it is normal that the Arabs and Moslems all over the world would raise high the banner of jihad for the liberation of Al-Quds and in defense of the Arab dignity.

AL-WAHDA weekly

Al-Wahdawi's editorial of October 11 says calling the Arab people for waging the war and jihad against the Zionist enemy to liberate the Holy Al-Quds comes in line with supporting the Intifada and blood of the martyrs. Silencing the Israeli obstinacy and its war machine would not be accomplished but through struggle, fighting and sacrifice. The images and feats of heroism presented now by the sons of Palestine confirm the hope of confirming the Palestinian map, with Al-Quds as its capital, on the world map.

AL-BALAGH weekly, October 10, 2000

An article in Al-Balagh newspaper says that the recent events in the Palestinian occupied territories have unmasked the real face of the Hebrew state it has been trying to hide when it has mustered all its power using all what it possesses of weapons against a defenseless people having nothing but stones

What draws the attention is the UN Security Council failure to reach an agreement among its members on a resolution compatible with seriousness of the massacres perpetrated. The U.S. refused any indication to Geneva conventions regarding protection of civilians during wars. As for the Arab and Islamic countries their official moves did not exceed denunciation and condemnation they are used to do following any disaster befalling the nation or a crime committed against them in one of its articles commenting on the Aqsa Uprising, has said the Aqsa Intifada has proved anew that freedom is not granted without sacrifices. It has proved that peace could not be realized through negotiations and that normalization is but a means for giving Israel more scope of time to strike root inside Palestine by expelling its people, building more settlements and finding enough time for military buildup.

The most recent Palestinian Intifada has come to strip the fragile "peace" process of its fig leaves and expose those sponsoring, calling and participating in it. The Palestinian authority is powerless on its territories and incapable of defending its citizen. The Palestinian refugees have not been permitted yet to return to their homeland. What kind of peace is this that does not give the minimum extent of right to its owners?

On the other hand the American president raises hell and loses his balance just because three Israeli soldiers have been arrested by Hizbulla organization, while he does not show any emotion towards the killing of tens of Palestinian children and women and wounding of thousands of them.

The Northern Territory has more than twice the land area of France but only a population of less than 200000. Darwin is the capital and Alice Springs the principal inland town. The Territory contains the Uluru-Kata Tjuta and Kakadu national parks.

The Australian Capital Territory was established within New South Wales in 1911 as the site for the national capital, Canberra. It is home to a number of national institutions including the federal Parliament, the National Library, the National Gallery of Australia, the High Court and the Australian War Memorial.

Landscape and climate:

The Australia's landscape is highly distinctive- vast stony and sandy desert and tablelands in the west and the center, sweeping platraus and plains flanking narrow coastal slopes to the east. The coastal areas feature broad sandy beaches and lush vegetation backed by a great variety of landforms, ranging from the steep cliffs of the blue Mountains west of Sydney and the tall, graceful eroded volcanic plugs of the Glasshouse Mountains north of Brisbane, to flat plains on the southern coast west of Adelaide.

The Murray and Darling rivers, the longest river system in Australia, form the Murray-Darling Basin covering more than one million square kilometers or 14 percent of the mainland area. Lake Eyre, a great salt lake more than 9000 square kilometers in area near the center of the continental land mass, is dry for lengthy periods.

About one-third of the mainland lies north of the Tropic of Capricorn with the remainder stretching to 39° south. Much of the country, about 70 percent, is arid or semiarid and a large part of the center is unsuitable for settlement. Eleven principal deserts make up some 20 percent of the mainland area. More than one-third of the continent is virtually desert owing to its low rain-

However, Australia does have wellwatched fertile areas close to the coast, where the bulk of the population is settled Here Australians experience a range of climates from wet and humid tropical conditions in the far north, through warm and temperate on the central east and west coasts, to cooler conditions in the southern coasts and Tasmania. All parts of Australia enjoy warm summers and relatively mild winters and it seldom snows in or near the large centers of population.

culture and the arts: Shaping Australia's image

Australia's contemporary arts are as unique and diverse as the society and continent they come from. They reflect an ancient landscape that is home to both the worl's oldest continuous cultural traditions and also to a rich mix of migrant cultures.

Indigenous and non-Indigenous artists have responded to the imaginative challenges presented by Australia and have developed new modes of expression that have brought their art and culture to international attention.

All forms of the performing arts, including music, theater and dance, have strong followings in Australia and have reached new levels of sophistication an excellent number of poets and novelists, making Australian literature one of the most vital branches of contemporary writing in English. For the last quarter of a century, Australia feature films have enjoyed remarkable success both in terms of popular as well critical acclaim. Visual arts

In the past 30 years, visual artists have increasingly played a vital role in shaping Australia' image of itself. Since the really 1970s, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander artists have developed new modes of expression that have brought their art and culture to international attention. The transfer of Dreaming designs from Sand paintings to boards and canvases by Pintupi elders in the central desert community of Papunya in 1971 was just one of many artistic initiatives that have created powerful new connections between Indigenous and non-indigenous Australians.

Knowing that I am born to die, I ask, who am I? Our greatness made of meanness, I am born to worship, But worldly pleasures drive me

I'm lured by its false decoration.

Then I should die, No one can avoid the fate, so how can

It is a fact none can deny, I came alone to the world and alone shall I die.

But when I die, who am I? I am nothing but a rotten corpse. That every one, even the most beloved one shall shun. Then, I shall return to the same clay, That I was made of, I shall be buried by the soil of the same stuff. The great lover shall put on me a rock

I shall be there all alone where no sun lights, nor does the moon. In the ever darkest place, in my grave, With a pale cloth, having nothing that might save and recede.

Me, from the worms that will have me as a feast. Before that, by the Earth, I am greatly hugged.

Then by two angels, I am asked About the health and wealth In what things I spent, And if I thanked God for his blessings

I can't lie, and I can't deceive, For every word, they will perceive If the answer's bad, damn me, I

But if it's good, I am one of the best. And that will decide, who am I? Khalid Ali Al-Quzahy

Palestine in the 20th Century

The British Mandate Aided by the Arabs, the British captured Palestine from the Ottoman Turks in 1917 and 1918. The Arabs revolted against the Turks because the British had promised them, in correspondence (1915-1916) with Husein ibn Ali of Mecca, the independence of their countries after the war. Britain, however, also made other, conflicting commitments. Thus, in the secret Sykes-Picot agreement with France and Russia (1916), it promised to divide and rule the region with its allies. In a third agreement, the Balfour Declaration of 1917, Britain promised the Jews, whose help it needed in the war effort, a Jewish "national home" in Palestine. This promise was subsequently incorporated in the mandate conferred on Britain by the League of Nations in 1922.

During their mandate (1922-1948) the British found their contradictory promises to the Jewish and Palestinian communities difficult to reconcile. The Zionists envisaged large-scale Jewish immigration, and some spoke of a Jewish state constituting all of Palestine. The Palestinians, however, rejected Britain's right to promise their country to a third party and feared dispossession by the Zionists; anti-Zionist attacks occurred in Jerusalem (1920) and Jaffa (1921). A 1922 statement of British policy denied Zionist claims to all of Palestine and limited Jewish immigration, but reaffirmed support for a Jewish national home. The British proposed establishing a legislative council, but Palestinians rejected this council as discriminatory.

After 1928, when Jewish immigration increased somewhat, British policy on the subject seesawed under conflicting Arab-Jewish pressures. Immigration rose sharply after the installation (1933) of the Nazi regime in Germany; in 1935 nearly 62,000 Jews entered Palestine. Fear of Jewish domination was the principal cause of the Arab revolt that broke out in 1936 and continued intermittently until 1939. By that time Britain had again restricted Jewish immigration and purchases of land.

The Post-World War II Period

The struggle for Palestine, which abated during World War II, resumed in 1945. The horrors of the Holocaust produced world sympathy for European Jewry and for Zionism, and although Britain still refused to admit 100,000 Jewish survivors to Palestine, many survivors of the Nazi death camps found their way there illegally. Various plans for solving the Palestine problem were rejected by one party or the other. Britain finally declared the mandate unworkable and turned the problem over to the United Nations in April 1947. The Jews and the Palestinians prepared for a showdown.

Although Palestinians outnumbered Jews (1,300,000 to 600,000), the latter were better prepared. They had a semiautonomous government, led by Ben-David Gurion, and their military, Haganah, was well trained and experienced. The Palestinians, on the other hand, had never recovered from the Arab revolt, and most of their leaders were in exile. The Mufti of Jerusalem, their principal spokesman, refused to accept Jewish statehood. When the UN proposed partition in November 1947, he rejected the plan while the Jews accepted it. In the military struggle that followed, the Palestinians were defeated. Terrorism was used on both sides.

The state of Israel was established on May 14, 1948. Five Arab armies, coming to the aid of the Palestinians, immediately attacked it. Israeli forces defeated the Arab armies, and Israel enlarged its territory. Jordan took the West Bank of the Jordan River, and Egypt took the Gaza

The war produced 780,000 Palestinian refugees. About half probably left out of fear and panic, while the rest were forced out to make room for Jewish immigrants from Europe and from the Arab The disinherited Palestinians spread throughout the neighboring countries, where they have maintained their Palestinian national identity and the desire to return to their homeland. Israel Must Withdraw From Palestinian Territories: Egyptian FM

SHARM EL SHEIKH (Egypt)—Israel must pull its troops back to the positions they held before the more than two weeks of violence began and stop the killings of Palestinians, said Egyptian Foreign Minister Amr Moussa here on Sunday. Moussa made the appeal at a joint press briefing with U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan after his 30-minute meeting here with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak on the latest Middle East sit-

Egypt considers the withdrawal as a necessity for the solution of the conflicts, said the minister while answering a question whether Friday's demonstrations by angry Palestinians would affect the ongoing political efforts aimed at stopping the violence. Demonstrations broke out Friday as tens of thousands of Palestinians took to the streets at different places of the territories Friday to protest against Israeli air strikes Thursday at Palestinian targets in the West Bank city of Ramallah and Gaza.

Israel violated all signed agreements with the Palestinians by sending troops to the Palestinian territories and Egypt is concerned about such a "very serious" situation, said the Egyptian minister. Israel must stop killing the Palestinians, otherwise, the proposed summit meeting here on Monday will be overshadowed by the grave event, and in turn the whole peace process in the region will be undermined by it, he warned. Replying to a question about the influence of the large-scale Palestinian demonstration on the Mideast situation, Moussa said,"We are very anxious. The whole region is protesting and is in a state of anger about what is taking place in the Palestinian territories.'

"Not only people in mosques and streets, we officials are also very angry," he noted, adding,"We cannot accept what has taken place in the Palestinian territories, and that is why we have sent our invitations for the (summit) conference (to defuse the tension)." "The conference has one goal to achieve. That is to go back to normalcy which means the withdrawal of Israeli Army from Palestinian towns and cities and from around (Palestinian) areas totally, because moving Israeli troops into the (Palestinian) territories is a clear-cut violation of the agreements reached in the past several years within the activity of the peace process," he said. The Israeli action is indeed threatening the stability of the whole region and the prospect of a just and lasting peace, he added. More than 100 people were killed, most of them Palestinians, and nearly 3,000 wounded in the two-week bloody clashes, the worst conflicts between the two sides since 1996. (Xinhua)

he project of" children painting their rights" has started in September 1998. It is meant to increase people's awareness of the child's rights. The project has focussed on the children's art abilities specially in the countryside and remote districts. The project has issued posters and a book containing creative contributions of the Yemeni children, reflected their deep understanding of the children's rights in education, choosing their own future and in life.

On Wednesday 11th Oct 2000 the activities of the first exhibition of children's paintings started at the national museum, where one thousand children displayed their paintings. The exhibition will last for seven days. The exhibition will grant a chance to a large number of children from centers of orphans and disabled to show their talents and how effective they could be in the Yemeni society.

The British ambassador Mr. Vic Henderson as well as Mr. Zain Al. Abiddin Fuad, the executive director of the project attended the opening ceremony.

The British ambassador said "children suffer from negligence and are deprived from their rights.

The creative idea of this project involves starting workshops with the children discussing their rights for a peaceful living, their rights of having a clean environment, and so on.

The paintings you see today are samples of hundreds of paintings the children drew in those workshops.

A book of uncolored paintings was issued to enable a large number of children to color those paintings themselves. It is another way of showing those painting to a larger number of children. In addition to that the exhibition will tour the country trying to influence more people and make them see the rights of children project we decided to head for a large number of disabled children and orphans. The exhibition has already toured 7 governorates. This exhibition is the first without being supervised by the ministry of education".
